Joe Wood pitches against the Giants today in the hope of bringing home the world's championship to Boston.

"Jeff" Tesreau, the Giants' "spit-baller," who twice has faced Wood and who twice has lost to "Smoky Joe," was John McGraw's choice again today.

At 1 o'clock the bleachers were nearly filled, and about one-half the reserved seat holders were in their places while thousands of fans stood in line outside the gates. The diamond was in excellent condition, but it was seen in practice that the strong wind bothered the outfielders in their judgment of fly balls.

The Giants came on to the field at 12:50 and plunged into practice work like colts. Another army of Giant rooters came to Boston this forenoon and again plunged heavily upon their favorites. The betting quotations varied slightly, but the average odds on the game stood at 5 to 4 on the Red Sox for today and 2 to 1 on the Bostonians for the series.

The defeat of the Red Sox, 5 to 2, yesterday afternoon, brought home to Boston the finish of the world's series. Also, it gave Boston an unexpected opportunity to see Joe Wood, the lad who more than anybody else has won the championship—if it is won. Wood pitched both of his triumphs in New York. Boston had its only conception of the mighty work of the speed ball lad from the telegraph wire. Today the crowd that goes to Fenway Park will see him in action.

Boston's defeat put $50,000 or $60,000 into the pockets of the Giants and the Red Sox managers. The players have no interest in the receipts of today's contest, nor of yesterday's or last Saturday's. After 10 per cent. of the receipts today are taken by the National Commission "for expenses" the balance is divided equally between the owners of both clubs.

Seventh Game Play by Play

THE GAME. FIRST INNING.

Giants—Devore made a single on a hit that bounded bad to Wagner. Doyle singled to centre on first ball pitched. Devore and Doyle pulled off a double steal. Snodgrass doubled to right, scoring Devore and Doyle. Murray grounded to Stahl, putting Snodgrass on third. Merkle singled to left, scoring Snodgrass. Merkle took second on the throw in. Herzog rapped to Wood and Merkle was caught between the bases, Wood to Wagner to Gardner. Herzog got second on the play and scored on Meyers' single to left. Fletcher singled past Stahl and Meyers ran to third.

Fletcher took second on the throw to that bag. Tesreau hit too hot for Wood, the ball glancing off to third and Myers scored. On a double steal Tesreau dashed to second and Fletcher made for the plate. Fletcher scored, and Yerkes did not return Cady's throw. Tesreau was then run down, Cady to Yerkes, to Stahl to Wagner. SIX RUNS, SEVEN HITS, ONE ERROR.

Red Sox—Hooper fanned. Yerkes walked. Speaker flied to Murray. Herzog threw out Lewis. NO RUNS. NO HITS. NO ERRORS.

HOLDS FLORIST LIABLE FOR SHOT

In a report by Judge Charles F. Perkins of the Brookline Municipal Court, filed today at Dedham, Albert H. Woods, the Brookline florist, who shot and killed Thomas Goldrop, the Cambridge gardener, on the night of September 18, is found criminally liable.

Judge Perkins, in summing up, said: "Woods was not in danger of bodily harm from Goldrop and had no apprehension of the deceased. Woods was not acquainted with Goldrop and had no motive in attacking him other than that of punishing any person whom he might discover trespassing upon his grounds and stealing. I find that Albert H. Woods was grossly negligent in discharging the gun at Goldrop and that for the death caused thereby he is criminally liable."

MAN WHO SHOT COLONEL MAKES PLEA OF GUILTY

CHICAGO, Oct. 15 (Noon).—Physicians who examined Theodore Roosevelt, victim of the bullet of John Schank, would-be assassin, today after a careful examination stated that the ex-President would live.

The announcement came after a consultation upon the various phases of the examination into the former President's condition.

It has not yet been decided when an attempt will be made to remove the bullet. It was said positively, however, that only a local anaesthetic would be necessary.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 15.—John Schrank, who attempted last night to assassinate Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, today pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with intent to kill. He probably will be lodged in State prison before night. The penalty is imprisonment for from one to fifteen years.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The following official bulletin concerning Colonel Roosevelt's condition was issued at 10:35 o'clock at Mercy Hospital:

Deep bullet wound of chest wall without striking a vital organ in transit. Wound not probed. Point of entrance one inch to right and one inch below level of right nipple. Bullet up and in distance of four inches deep in chest wall. No evidence that bullet penetrated lungs. No operation to remove the bullet is indicated at present time. Condition hopeful, but so important as to demand absolute rest for a number of days.

Present condition of patient: Pulse, 90; temperature, 99.2; respiration, 20.

Signed

JOHN B. MURPHY,
ARTHUR L. TERRELL,
O. C. SAYLES.

"The Colonel's condition is such that I believe he will be able to resume his tour in a week or ten days," said Philip Roosevelt.

Dr. Janes, the X-ray expert, who took pictures of Colonel Roosevelt's wound in Milwaukee, was called hastily to Chicago this afternoon. This gave rise to the belief the Colonel's condition might be more serious than at first supposed.

COLONEL COMFORTABLE IN CHICAGO HOSPITAL

COLONEL EATS HEARTY BREAKFAST AND JOKES WITH THE DOCTORS.

An official statement issued at 8:40 a. m. at Mercy Hospital stated that the latest X-Ray examination developed no new complications in Colonel Roosevelt's condition. As soon as Colonel Roosevelt is sufficiently recovered he will go to his home at Oyster Bay. He will not continue his campaign trip, Dr. Terrill announced.

Colonel Roosevelt ate a hearty breakfast of bacon and eggs, tea and toast, and read a book, while the doctors consulted over the necessity for an operation.

"I feel bully," he said, when asked about his condition.

"NO DANGER WHATEVER."

At 7:22 o'clock five surgeons made an X-ray examination of Colonel Roosevelt.

After the examination Dr. Terrell, the ex-President's attending physician, said the patient's condition was good. Colonel Roosevelt, he said, was resting well, though fatigued by the trip and the strain he had undergone.

"There is no danger whatever," he said.

A nurse who was in the room when an X-ray examination was made of Colonel Roosevelt said the bullet had been found in the fleshy part of the chest.

The bullet is on the right side and an inch and a half below the right nipple.

Theodore Roosevelt arrived in Chicago shortly after 2 o'clock this morning from Milwaukee, where he was shot last night, and in four hours was taken to Mercy Hospital for an operation.

Just before the ambulance left the station of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway at 9:15 a. m., Dr. John B. Murphy, the famous Chicago surgeon, said:

Colonel Roosevelt's wound is more serious than we at first thought. He should be in a hospital bed, not in a railroad coach. We will make an X-ray examination at once. I am not, of course, prepared to say now how serious his injury is.

Dr. Murphy was one of four physicians who met the former President.

Colonel Roosevelt spent the time in a special car berth with doctors constantly in attendance from his arrival here until he was removed to the hospital. The station was deserted when the Colonel was carried to the ambulance. There was no crowd and no cheering. There were a few policemen on hand, but they were not needed.

Two Doctors by His Side.

The Colonel stretched out at full length in the ambulance in order to conserve his strength for the operation. A physician sat on either side of him making constant note of temperature and respiration.

Several of Colonel Roosevelt's friends had hurried to the station, and they filled a little cavalcade of six automobiles which followed the ambulance taking him to the hospital for the removal of the bullet fired into his body by John Schrank.

Every precaution was taken to prevent a crowd from gathering about the Roosevelt car. Few persons knew just where it stood, and, except in the case of newspaper men and a few others, the railroad authorities refused to reveal its situation. In order to avert possible crowds, it was announced early that Chicago Avenue would be taken to the Presbyterian Hospital. At the last minute, however, the patient was taken to Mercy Hospital, where preparations already had been made for his reception and care.

The Colonel exhibited courage throughout.

Although his cheeks were blanched and his teeth hard clenched as he crept down the rising pain, he insisted on walking from his car to the ambulance. A friend walked on each side, supporting him.

Once the Colonel grinned when Dr. Murphy began to express his concern openly. However, Dr. Murphy explained that Colonel Roosevelt's powerful constitution was a strong element in his favor.

"The thing we most fear now is blood poisoning," said Dr. Murphy on the way to the hospital. "But every possible precaution known to medical science is being taken to prevent that."

Colonel Roosevelt talked to the surgeons as they prepared the X-ray machine for a final examination before beginning to probe for the bullet.

Colonel Roosevelt in the hospital here showed the same fortitude which he had shown in the hospital at Milwaukee, where, while upon the operating table, he dictated the following telegram to his wife in New York:

Am feeling fine. Have a bullet in chest, but it will amount to practically nothing. Man who shot me used 38-caliber revolver. Talked for hour and half after being shot. Have felt fine all time and will only be under two or three days.

THEODORE.

Before leaving Milwaukee Roosevelt took the arrangements into his own hands and called up Medill McCormick, the Progressive leader in Illinois, on the telephone at Chicago. The Colonel asked Mr. McCormick to be at the Northwest station and was automobile, to take him to the hospital. The Colonel's last words to Mr. McCormick were:

"I have just finished shaving myself."

Seven minutes later, at 12:47 o'clock, the Roosevelt special left Milwaukee for Chicago.

The journey from Milwaukee was made at moderate speed, the train at no time exceeding forty miles an hour. Before it was learned here that the ex-President would be brought from Milwaukee preparations were made to rush four surgeons to Milwaukee on a special train. They were Dr. John B. Murphy, Albert Ochsner, Arthur D. Bevan and Robert D. MacArthur. The special which was to carry these surgeons was made up and ready to leave when word was received that the Colonel would be brought here.

The Colonel rested easily after the train reached Chicago, and his car was brought to a standstill. He was uneasy on the trip and seemed to feel considerable pain. The physicians decided not to disturb him till daylight. He was aroused by Dr. Murphy half an hour before the start for the hospital.

A superficial examination of the wound was made. The Colonel smiled at the preparations for the trip were made. When all was ready he stepped from the car waving aside the physicians and attendants who would have helped him out, but two friends assisted him.

Lines of Pain in Face.

"Shot again," he remarked as newspaper photographers fired a volley of flashlights at him. He smiled as the pictures were made. Then he weakened, and at the hospital his whole appearance was out on an operating table. The bullet of changed.

The Colonel sagged down between the men who assisted him, and they practically supported his weight as he took the few steps into the hospital. The smile had left his face. It was drawn with pain, and the fight he had made to hide his suffering was disclosed in deep lines that marked his forehead and the corners of his mouth.

The change was startling to his physicians. There was a hurried consultation, the doctors being undecided whether the operation should be attempted when he was in such a weak condition. Inside the hospital door the Colonel sank into a wheeled chair and was removed to a private room.

Dr. R. G. Hayles, a Milwaukee surgeon, accompanied the Colonel, and went with him to the hospital. It took twelve minutes to reach the hospital.

The ambulance drove east in Kinzie street to State street, then turned south and crossed the Chicago River at the Loop. At Randolph street the cavalcade turned east again; then the ambulance turned south into Michigan avenue. A doctor inside leaned forward and whispered to the chauffeur, and the car shifted into the avenue.

Philip Roosevelt, a cousin of the former President, was seated beside the driver of the ambulance. Dr. Murphy and Dr. Hayles rode in the tonneau. As the ambulance neared the hospital, the physicians again whispered to the driver and the speed was increased.

As the car turned into Twenty-fifth street it was going at racing speed. At the hospital there was a slight delay, then the patient was taken inside.

In Suite No. 312-314 on the third floor the physicians made an X-ray examination. Dr. George Hochrein was the principal operator. Dr. W. B. McCauley, Dr. Philip Kraus cher and Dr. John F. Golden assisted.

While the examination was under way Dr. Terrell, who has accompanied Roosevelt on his trip, issued this statement:

"Colonel Roosevelt's condition is very good. It is almost normal. He is tired and is resting, but there is absolutely no chance of complications of a serious nature. He is in no danger whatever, and his quick recovery is anticipated."

Nurse Tells of Examination.

The X-ray examination lasted several minutes. After it was completed the surgeons issued no immediate statement, and the first word from the room of the former President was brought by a nurse who had been present. She said the bullet had been found in the fleshy part of the right breast, and was about an inch and a half below the right nipple.

The nurse said the bullet had not penetrated the wall of the chest, but was lodged in the muscular tissue.

Mr. Roosevelt's spirits are of the best. "Carrying that speech in that pocket certainly was a lucky thing for you," said Dr. A. J. Ochsner, of Chicago, "Ho! Ho!" laughed the Colonel. "That speech would have stopped more than a bullet. It was a great speech."

Colonel Roosevelt's wound is described by Dr. Terrell as being just above the fourth rib, three inches deep and above the diaphragm.

"There is positively no indication that the lung has been pierced," said Dr. Terrell.

"The wound is a simple one. Colonel Roosevelt has a phenomenal development of the chest. It is largely due to the fact that he is a physical marvel that he was not fatally wounded. He is one of the most powerful men I have ever seen laid

DRAMATIC MOMENT WHEN COL. ROOSEVELT WAS SHOT

"I will stand up; I must stand up now if I never do again."

These were Colonel Roosevelt's words to his cousin, Philip Roosevelt, a moment after the assassin's bullet had struck him. Philip Roosevelt, who was at the Colonel's side, begged him to remain seated in the position to which he had fallen at the shot. Philip Roosevelt said that at the shot the Colonel, who was standing waving his hat, wavered and fell to a crouching position on the seat of the automobile.

"Sit still; sit still, cousin Theodore," urged Philip.

"No, I will stand up. Don't hurt that man. Don't let anyone hurt him. Bring him to me," ordered the Colonel, rising, to his feet and speaking in his usual strong voice. "Don't hurt the poor devil. He doesn't know what he has done."

Martin, the stenographer, who was the hero of the occasion, was still holding Schrank in his grasp. Henry F. Cochems, who had jumped in front of the Colonel, turned to him.

"Hit pinked me, Harry, he pinked me," said the Colonel, with his hand over the wound in his right breast. "I got that all right."

"For Heaven's sake, Colonel, go to a hospital," said Cochems.

"Don't cry to speak."

"I will go there and speak tonight," Colonel Roosevelt said with deliberation, "if it kills me. I will speak if I fall on the platform. I have a message to deliver. This may be my last chance to deliver it. I may be hurt worse than I feel. This may be my last speech. I am strong now. I want to go right away while I am good for it."

Colonel Roosevelt opened his waistcoat and bloody shirt and glanced at the wound. It was a black hole, surrounded by bruised and bleeding flesh. Little blood came from it.

"Looks like a shot from a .38," said Colonel Roosevelt, "but I am not coughing. I guess I'm all right. Somebody give me a handkerchief."

Dr. Terrell handed him a fresh one and he put it over the wound and closed his shirt over the place. Few persons saw the Colonel bandage his own wound, as he took pains to conceal his movements, and the operation took but a moment. He had been standing all the time, and he turned and waved his hat, as cheerful as he had been when the assassin's shot sounded.

revolver shot in his chest is none the less remarkable."

PLEA OF GUILTY IS MADE BY MAN WHO SHOT COL. ROOSEVELT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 15.—John Schrank, who attempted last night to assassinate Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, today pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with intent to kill. He probably will be lodged in State prison before night. The penalty is imprisonment for from one to fifteen years.

Schrank said just before he was arraigned that he had money of his own and that an uncle in New York left him $25,000. It was this money which was used in trailing Colonel Roosevelt from place to place in an effort to find opportunity to assassinate him.

"No Irresponsible Lunatic."

"I am not the irresponsible lunatic people see into think," declared Schrank. "I know what I am doing and I have been acting systematically. I expect I shall get fifteen years or so—maybe more. I fully anticipated a life sentence or hanging. I would gladly have paid either penalty for a greater success."

Schrank said he was not a drinking man. He had never used liquor, even when he was a saloon keeper.

"I am guilty as charged. That is all I have to say." This was Schrank's answer when Judge N. B. Nelson, in Police Court, asked him to plead.

The plea amounted to a plea on arraignment. The court is without power to sentence to the penitentiary, and plans were made to transfer Schrank to a guarded chamber in the Municipal Court to plead again.

Schrank walked into court under heavy guard. His passage from the cell through the crowded elevator was accomplished without incident. Although throngs watched there was no attempt to attack him.

Ready for Him at Prison.

As the charge against him was read, Schrank listened gravely. He displayed no sign of emotion even when the clerk emphasized the words, "with intent to do murder."

The Waupun prison is sixty miles from Milwaukee, and Schrank probably will make the trip there in an automobile. The State prison officials have been told to prepare to receive him.

SCHRANK SAYS VISIONS DROVE HIM TO ATTACK

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 15.—John Schrank, the man who tried to assassinate ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, looked wonderingly out of red-rimmed blue eyes this morning upon a group of newspaper correspondents at the central police station, and said:

Suicide? I never have thought of it. I did not expect to survive Theodore Roosevelt more than ten minutes. I thought the mob would lynch me before the barrel of my revolver had time to cool.

That was of no consequence to me. The work of my life was to be finished when I sent a bullet into the heart of this ambitious third termer.

They tell me I have failed. Well, in that case, I suppose my life has been wasted. I shall never have another opportunity.

But I have done my best and more than that no man could have done. Some men must be failures, and if I am chosen to be one of them—what can I do about it?

The man has in his expression the dialective look of the fanatical political assassin, the veritable mania of politics, the crescendo of patriotic insanity. Of cool thought, he seems incapable, and in its place is emotional conviction.

Impersonal Attitude.

When Roosevelt had the man brought before him, immediately after the shooting last night, when the ex-President looked steadily into the eyes of the man who had shot him, the vague blue eyes of John Schrank showed no personal recognition. He looked into the eyes of Roosevelt as a surgeon looks into an open wound.

Two Valuable Recipes for the Hair and Skin

Washing the head with soap results in discolored, "stringy" hair and a scalp that is dry and scaly or unduly oily. Shampooing with canthrox soon corrects the condition that causes this, and a teaspoonful dissolved in a cup hot water is ample for the thickest head of hair. Canthrox is soothing and invigorating, and not alone cleanses thoroughly and completely but stimulates the hair-roots to healthy activity. Hair shampooed with canthrox is always soft, fluffy, lustrous and of a rich, even color.

Women having envious complexions invariably use just a plain spermax lotion, which is a great natural beautifier. This is made by dissolving 4 ounces spermax in ¼ pint witch hazel or hot water to which has been added 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. The lotion dries quickly and cannot be detected when on and gives to the finest complexion an added charm and elegance. It is especially good to clear the skin of pimples, blackheads, blotches, sallowness, oiliness and other complexion defects and to protect it from harsh or cold winds.

LEADERS OF ALL PARTIES DEPLORE MADMAN'S ATTACK ON T. R.

DID IT TO AVENGE MEMORY OF McKINLEY, INSANE SLAYER SAID.

cided that it was my duty to kill Colonel Roosevelt.

I have been personally acquainted with Roosevelt since the former President was Police Commissioner of New York in 1895. I was first attracted to him as a political personage during the convention in Chicago. Then I began to think seriously of him as a menace to his country when he cried "Thief" at that convention. I looked upon his plan to start a third party as a danger to the country; my knowledge of history, gained through much reading, convinced me that Colonel Roosevelt was engaged in a dangerous undertaking. I was convinced that if he was defeated at the Fall election he would again cry "Thief" and that his action would plunge the country into a bloody civil war.

McKinley in Dream.

I deemed it my duty, after much consideration of the situation, to put him out of the way. I was living at my home address at the time, but soon after I had a dream in which Ex-President McKinley appeared to me. I was told by McKinley in this dream that it was not Czolgosz who murdered him, but Roosevelt. McKinley, in this dream, told me that his blood was on Roosevelt's hands, and that Roosevelt had killed him so that he might become President.

I was more deeply impressed by what I read in the newspapers than others and after having this dream was more convinced than ever that I should free the country from the menace of Roosevelt's ambition.

"On September 21 I removed to the White Hotel at No. 56 Canal street, near the Bowery. I did this as my first step in a plan to kill Roosevelt. I went soon afterward to a gun store on Broadway and purchased a revolver.

Trailed the Colonel.

I then purchased a ticket to Charleston, S. C., and went to that city by steamboat. My first plan was to catch the Roosevelt party in New Orleans but I found that to be impossible. I accordingly went to Charleston, and upon my arrival there had $300 left. I left a bag at the Houseley House in that city, which contained, besides the box in which the revolver I had purchased had been packed, a deed to property on Eighty-first street in New York, worth $25,000, and naturalization papers. That bag is there now.

Not being able to carry out my plan in Charleston, I proceeded to Atlanta, Ga., then to Chattanooga, Tenn., and from there to Evansville and Indianapolis, Ind., and to Chicago. In each one of these cities I tried to shoot Roosevelt, but was unable to waylay him. I decided to shoot him as he arrived in Chicago and waited for him at the Chicago & Northwestern Station, but the intended victim did not arrive there.

I then decided to do the shooting at the Coliseum, but in this case, as in others, Roosevelt left the building by an entrance other than the one at which I had stationed myself.

Not Sorry for Shooting

During all this time I had traveled under the name of Walter Ross, except at Charleston, where I gave my right name.

While in Chicago on Saturday I was at the Jackson Hotel and decided after my failure at the Coliseum to come to Milwaukee in advance of the party and to lay my plans so carefully that I could not fail. I came to Milwaukee Sunday morning and went to the Argyl, a lodging house on Third street.

I then purchased newspapers to inform myself as to Roosevelt's whereabouts and learned on Monday that he was to arrive at 5 o'clock. I learned also that he was to be a guest at the Gilpatrick and I managed to gain a position near the entrance, where I could shoot to kill when Roosevelt appeared. I am sorry I have caused all this trouble for the good people of Milwaukee and Wisconsin, but I am not sorry that I carried out my plans.

ROOSEVELT ALWAYS WENT ARMED WHILE HE WAS PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Colonel Roosevelt, while he was President, was always armed and on the alert for any possible assault by a would-be assassin. The lesson of President McKinley's death he regarded as having a peculiar and particular application to himself, and he protected himself accordingly.

Shortly after he succeeded Mr. McKinley, Colonel Roosevelt sent for some Washington newspaper correspondents to discuss with them the matter of covering important news affecting the White House. In the course of their conversation reference was made to Mr. McKinley's assassination, and Colonel Roosevelt made this remark concerning the assassin, Czolgosz:

"I'll bet he would not have shot me twice."

The inference from this remark, taken in connection with other remarks made by Colonel Roosevelt, was that he would have returned an assailant's fire. It was plain from what he said then that he went armed constantly, and presumably had made it a practice previously to carry a revolver.

That Colonel Roosevelt, during his seven and a half years as President, never went on the streets without a revolver in his pocket was shown by incidents known to several of those who saw him frequently. On the blustery Winter day that Elihu Root quit the cabinet of President Roosevelt to return to the practice of law in New York, Colonel Roosevelt walked over from the White House to the Root residence to say goodbye to his secretary of state.

In spite of the cold wind Colonel Roosevelt wore no overcoat. As he sprinted across from the White House to the Root residence, a hundred yards away, the tails of his frock coat fluttered in the breeze, exposing to the view of the cavalrymen assembled to escort Mr. Root to the railway station the butt of a good-sized revolver.

An occasion that brought to the notice of the public that President Roosevelt carried a revolver was his visit to St. Paul, on a trip to the Pacific coast. Through an error, President Roosevelt and Samuel R. Van Sant, Governor of Minnesota, exchanged overcoats. It came out the next day, after President Roosevelt's departure, that when Governor Van Sant put his hands into the deep pockets of the overcoat he was wearing, and supposing was his own, he found in one of them a new, large calibre weapon. An inspection of the tailor's label in the coat proved to the startled Governor that both the coat and the revolver belonged to the President of the United States.

LEARN ASSAILANT OF ROOSEVELT LIVED IN NEW YORK FOR MONTHS

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The police set out today to verify details of the first confession made by John Schrank, the Bavarian maniac, who shot Colonel Roosevelt. They quickly established the truth of his story that he was a lodger at the White Hotel, a lodging house at No. 156 Canal street. Schrank lived there nine months, occupying a room that cost him $2 a week. Gustav Jost, owner of the hotel, said: "I never knew Schrank well. I often chatted with him, but he was a quiet fellow and never had much to say. When he came to the hotel he wanted to be known as "Simmang," but later he admitted his name was Schrank. He did not seem to have very much money and had few friends. No one ever visited him. He left the hotel in September and I haven't seen him since."

Bernard Berger, to whom Schrank referred in Milwaukee, said he never knew Schrank, but thought a man of that name formerly owned a saloon in or around Tenth street.

Mrs. Stephen Anctke, who lives at No. 370 East Tenth street, could not recall today knowing any one by the name of Schrank who had apartments in the building.

"There must be a mistake in the name" said Mrs. Anctke. "I believe the man's name is really Schreck. Schreck and his wife and my husband and I came from the old country five years ago.

About a year ago the Schrecks opened a restaurant in Third street between First avenue and Avenue A, but they sold out recently. Schreck was a Socialist."

Mrs. Anctke described Schreck as tall, partly bald, and about forty years old. Schrank is said to be stout and much younger than forty.

A number of lodgers at the White Hotel, where the most was learned about Schrank, remembered him. They said today they had never heard him discuss politics. He read the newspapers regularly, but never had anything to say about current events.

Prominent Men Express Sympathy for Roosevelt

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor of Boston:

I cannot believe that any man in his senses could do such a thing. It was a dastardly act, and will merit the condemnation of all citizens, regardless of their feeling towards Mr. Roosevelt.

RICHARD T. MACLAURIN, President of Massachusetts Institute of Technology:

Until I learn more about the attempt to assassinate Colonel Roosevelt I will not comment on the affair. It seems almost incredible and I hope Mr. Roosevelt escaped without serious injury.

JOHN L. BATES, Former Governor of Massachusetts:

It is significant of the extent to which the passions of the people have risen because of the intensity of the heated campaign. It is a matter of regret that such a thing has happened, but we should all be thankful that Colonel Roosevelt escaped practically unhurt.

CHARLES WARE, State Treasurer of the Progressive Party:

It is a terrible thing. The Socialist party will surely repudiate the act, that is, if the man arrested is a bona-fide Socialist. I am overjoyed to learn that the Colonel was not seriously injured.

LEMUEL H. MURLIN, President of Boston University:

It is terrible. It was undoubtedly the work of some crank. I am anxious to learn all about the affair. If this man who fired the shot is a Socialist, as the first reports state, I feel sure that the Socialists in general will denounce his action.

JOSEPH WALKER, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives:

Such a thing as the shooting is a terrible thing to happen, even though I understand he was only slightly injured. It is too bad and a thing to be regretted. It is liable to happen to any public man. Mr. Roosevelt has the sympathy of everybody.

DR. JOHN W. COUGHLIN, Democratic National Committeeman from Massachusetts:

An attempt at assassination never weakens a cause. No American can think of this dastardly act without having every drop of blood tingle in his veins with amazement and anger.

Colonel Roosevelt must have shown a great deal of courage to go on and speak as he did after his injury. It is earnestly to be hoped that it will prove nothing more serious than a temporary inconvenience.

CHARLES S. BIRD, Progressive Candidate for Governor:

The Progressives of Massachusetts greatly deplore the attempt made on the life of our great leader. It is cause for deep and heartfelt rejoicing from all Americans, without distinction of party, that it was not more serious, and they will join with us in our expressions of sympathy to the wife and family of Colonel Roosevelt following the cruel attempt on his life.

JOHN W. WEEKS, Congressman from Massachusetts:

I greatly regret that anything of this kind should have happened. It is sincerely to be hoped that the injury will prove as slight as the first reports say it is. I don't know what one can say about it until we have more facts. It is a very shocking thing, and Colonel Roosevelt will have the sympathy of everybody.

PROFESSOR ALBERT BUSHNELL HART, a Progressive Leader in Massachusetts:

The experience of Theodore Roosevelt reveals the danger which a positive, earnest and enthusiastic man enters upon when he engages in a very warm campaign. Mr. Roosevelt is the great leader of the great party and any suffering and danger to him is a cause of personal anxiety to millions of his fellow countrymen.

The Progressive party as a unit feel that the cause of their leader is the cause of every member of the party.

DANIEL COSGROVE, Progressive Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor:

If true, it was a most deplorable occurrence. My sympathy for the Colonel's family is unbounded.

ROBERT P. BASS, Governor of New Hampshire:

One thing that is very clear to me is that any successful attempt on Theodore Roosevelt's life at this time would be a national calamity, such a thing as we haven't experienced in fifty years. Even an attempt upon his life will stir the nation from end to end. This affair is to be greatly regretted, but there is great assurance in the fact that his injuries are slight.

CHARLES H. THOMPSON, New England Manager Progressive Campaign:

I have just received a telegram telling of the attempted assassination of our great leader, and the fortitude with which he bore up after being shot. It was alike a terrible and sad thing. We can now only hope that the news that he will probably recover will be borne out by later developments.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE COMMITTEE of the Progressive Party in telegram to Colonel:

Massachusetts has just learned of the attempt on your life. The Progressive State Committee now in session, sincerely hopes that the injury is not serious and that the Almighty may protect you to carry on the great work you have so ably begun in behalf of the American people.

JAMES B. CONNOLLY, author of sea stories:

Let us all be thankful that the Colonel is not seriously injured for we all realize that no other living man could carry on the work he is now attempting.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Senior U. S. Senator from Massachusetts:

This is a most terrible and melancholy thing. Put that as strongly as you want to. That is all there is to say about it. It is all I can say. I am not surprised that Mr. Roosevelt bore himself in a heroic way; he would do that, anyhow.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Progressive Leader in New Hampshire:

I cannot believe that the man was a Socialist as is reported, although he may have so proclaimed himself. The Socialists are sincere in their desire for the welfare of humanity, and no individual in the United States has labored more unceasingly for the people of America and more persistently fought the battle for a larger social service than Theodore Roosevelt. It is an outrage the whole American people, regardless of party, will resent.

CHARLES E. HATFIELD, Chairman Massachusetts Republican State Committee:

I am very, very sorry.

THOMAS W. LAWSON:

Thank God he was not seriously hurt, and thank God the poor fellow who did it was demented. No sane man would have done it.

MOSES EDWIN CLAPP, United States Senator from Minnesota:

In 90,000,000 of people there necessarily is a large percentage of insane; but not yet confined.

EBEN S. DRAPER, former Governor:

The bullet of that intended assassin wounded every good American citizen. I give thanks, as every one of our good citizens does, that Colonel Roosevelt survived the despicable attack. Differ with him in the partisanship of politics we may, but the time has not yet come for the bullet of the assassin to determine what may or may not be in American politics. The country, I devotedly hope, will have years and years yet of the life of Theodore Roosevelt. His assassination would be a world-wide calamity. I'm as thankful as I am glad that he escaped.

JAMES M. VAHEY.

Roosevelt's great vitality will pull him through. His unquestioned physical courage will save him. And all sane Americans, no matter what their political differences, will rejoice that it is so. For assassination has no place in American politics.

JOHN D. LONG, Former Governor of Massachusetts:

It is an exceedingly unfortunate occurrence. I am mighty sorry for the Colonel. The affair is undoubtedly the act of a madman. It can have no political significance or effect.

MATTHEW HALE, Progressive Leader in Massachusetts:

I am eternally sorry for Colonel Roosevelt's family and, of course, I am very glad that the condition of the Colonel is no more serious than it is.

ARCHDEACON SAMUEL G. BABCOCK of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts:

It is a great shame and disgrace to have this happen in our country. With others, I have the warmest sympathy with Colonel Roosevelt and his family in this misfortune, and I sincerely hope he will speedily recover.

REV. GEORGE L. PERIN, head of Franklin Square House:

This attempt at assassination is a direct result of a campaign of lies and slander against Colonel Roosevelt. With the considerable strain that he is under, even though the injury may be slight, there may well be apprehension on account of it.

DUDLEY DEAN of Cohasset, who served in the Rough Riders with the Colonel: That surely is a shame. But wasn't it just like T. R. to go ahead and make a speech with that bullet in him? We who know him in Cuba wouldn't expect anything else. He'd either be knocked flat on his back, or he'd be up and right in the ring all the time.

STIR IN LONDON IS CAUSED BY SHOOTING OF COL. ROOSEVELT

LONDON, Oct. 15.—English newspapers today carried in heavy, black type the details of the shooting of Colonel Roosevelt. Few of them commented editorially, however. An exception was the Evening Standard, which said:

"American statesmen have before now found out how terrible a thing it is to live in a country where politics is taken so seriously. It is only a few years back that President McKinley was the victim of a fanatic but it is of Lincoln rather than McKinley that the news sets us thinking.

"Lincoln possessed, like Roosevelt, a quality of personal magnetism, but Lincoln's magnetism was far more subtle and therefore, as paradoxical as it sounds, far more comprehensible. Colonel Roosevelt, with all his qualities, is an obvious man, and obvious people, as a rule, are lacking in that peculiar quality of personal magnetism.

"Even Americans find themselves at a loss to explain Colonel Roosevelt's undoubted influence over them. The contrast with the martyred Lincoln will, we trust, be continued by Colonel Roosevelt's speedy recovery."

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO HURRY TO HUSBAND; DAUGHTERS GO ALSO

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Joseph M. Dixon, campaign leader for Colonel Roosevelt, announced today that Mrs. Roosevelt would leave this afternoon for Chicago. This announcement was made following a long consultation with Mrs. Roosevelt and a receipt of a telegram from Chicago stating that the Colonel could not come East for several days.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be accompanied by her daughter Ethel and the party will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning on the Twentieth Century Limited.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of Congressman Nicholas Longworth, left at 4:15 o'clock this morning for the bedside of her father, Colonel Roosevelt.

WHAT HAPPENED AS THE WOULD-BE ASSASSIN FIRED AT COL. ROOSEVELT

Colonel Roosevelt was shot as he was in front of the Hotel Gilpatrick here. He reached Milwaukee at five o'clock yesterday afternoon and making his way through the crowd which had gathered at the station, entered an automobile and was driven to the hotel.

He took dinner in a private dining room on the main floor with the members of the party on his private car.

After dinner Colonel Roosevelt went to his room on the second floor of the hotel, and shortly before eight o'clock he started for the Auditorium.

His automobile stood in front of the door and about it was a big crowd waiting to catch a glimpse of the Colonel as he started off.

With the Colonel were Philip Roosevelt, a young cousin; Harry Cochems, Mr. Martin and Captain Girard.

The crowd pressed about the Colonel and gave a cheer as he appeared.

As the party approached the automobile, Colonel Roosevelt's companions stood aside and he stepped into the car.

Martin entered directly behind him and sat on the further side of the car.

Stood Up to Wave Hat.

Colonel Roosevelt stood up, waving his hat in answer to the cheers of the crowd.

The assassin was standing in the crowd a few feet from the automobile.

He pushed his way to the side of the car and, raising his gun, fired.

Martin caught the flash, and leaped over the car a second after the bullet sped on its way.

Colonel Roosevelt barely moved as the shot was fired.

Before the crowd knew what had happened, Martin, who is six feet tall and a former football player, had landed squarely on the assassin's shoulders and had borne him to the ground.

He threw his right arm about the man's neck with a death-like grip and with his left arm seized the hand that held the revolver. In another second he had disarmed him.

Colonel Roosevelt stood calmly looking on as though nothing had happened. Martin picked the man up as though he were a child and carried him the few feet which separated them from the car, almost to the side of the Colonel.

Audience Thunderstruck.

Despite the protests of his physicians, the Colonel strode out of the dressing room at the Auditorium after the shooting and onto the stage. A large crowd, packed into the big building, cheered loudly as he entered, and without a word to indicate what had happened, went to his seat.

For several minutes the crowd, no man of whom suspected that the Colonel bore a bullet in his body, kept up its cheering.

Then Mr. Cochems stepped to the front of the platform and held up his hand. There was something in his manner which had its effect upon the crowd and the cheering died suddenly away.

"I have something to tell you," said Mr. Cochems, "and I hope you will receive the news with calmness."

His voice shook as he spoke and a deathlike stillness settled over the throng. "Colonel Roosevelt has been shot. He is wounded." He spoke in a low tone, but such was the stillness that everyone heard. A cry of astonishment and horror went up from the crowd which was thrown into confusion in an instant.

Mr. Cochems turned and looked inquiringly at Colonel Roosevelt.

"Tell us, are you hurt?"

Men and women shouted wildly. Some of them rose from their seats and rushed forward to look more closely at the Colonel.

Colonel Roosevelt rose and walked to the edge of the platform to quiet the crowd. He raised his hand, and instantly there was silence.

"It's true," he said. Then slowly he unbuttoned his coat and placed his hand on his breast. Those in the front of the crowd could catch a sight of the blood-stained garment.

Calls Shot "Nothing."

"I'm going to ask you to be very quiet," said Colonel Roosevelt, "and please excuse me from making you a very long speech. I'll do the best I can but you see there is a bullet in my body. But it's nothing. I'm not hurt badly."

A sigh of relief went up from the crowd and then an outburst of tumultuous cheering. Thoroughly reassured by the Colonel's action that he was in no serious danger, the people settled back into their seats to hear his speech.

Colonel Roosevelt began to speak in a firm voice, somewhat lower than its usual tone, and, except that his characteristic gestures were less emphatic than usual, there was nothing about the man to indicate his condition. After he had been speaking a few moments, however, his voice sank somewhat and he seemed to stand rather unsteadily. Dr. Terrell and Colonel Lyon stepped up to him and the doctor insisted that he stop.

"I'm going to finish this speech," said the Colonel emphatically. "I'm all right; let me alone."

Dr. Terrell and Colonel Lyon sat down again. The Colonel continued his speech evidently with increasing effort, but he succeeded in making himself heard and talked for more than an hour.

Then he was rushed to his automobile and dashed through the streets to the Emergency Hospital.

The operating room had been placed in readiness to receive Colonel Roosevelt and six of the leading surgeons of Milwaukee were awaiting his arrival.

Colonel Roosevelt was undressed and placed upon the operating table, although he insisted that he was not badly hurt and that the doctors were taking it too seriously.

In all 1,270 persons were sentenced.

JOHN M'DEVITT WEDS MISS DEVLIN

Several of the officers and members of the United Irish League were present at the Mission Church, Roxbury, today, for the wedding of Miss Alice M. Devlin of Roxbury and John McDevitt, a prominent business man of Beachmont, who were married at 9 o'clock by the Rev. Charles Hoff, C.S. S.R. Miss Devlin has been private secretary to Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, national treasurer of the United Irish League of America. The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin, en train, with large white picture hat, and carried bride roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Elizabeth Devlin.

GEN. BANCROFT SELLS HIS FARM

The sale of "Shawfieldmont," General William A. Bancroft's country home at Groton, which has just become known, has strengthened the rumors current on the street for some time that the president of the Boston Elevated Railway will resign his position shortly.

General Bancroft is abroad at present, spending the six weeks' vacation granted him by the Elevated road. Because of his absence, members of the General's family refuse to discuss the sale of the property except to say that the deal was practically consummated. The purchaser is Everett E. Tarbell of Pepperell and the price is said to be more than $200,000.

BAR CHILDREN ON MISSIONARY SHIP

The missionary ship George B. Cluett arrived today from St. Anthony's, N. F. Among those who returned were Dr. John Mason Little and their infant son, born July 1; Mrs. Jessie Halsey, wife of the Rev. Jesse Halsey, and her two sons. Mrs. Halsey brought with her Alice and Alfred, the fifteen and eleven-year-old children of Edward Evans, a reindeer herder of St. Anthony's, to educate them here. The immigration authorities would not allow them to land, as they were under sixteen years old and their parents were not in this country.

BURGESS SAILS; TO BUILD U. S. MACHINES

W. Starling Burgess, the aviator and designer of the Burgess biplane, and Mrs. Burgess were passengers who sailed on the Cunard liner Laconia today. Just before leaving Mr. Burgess said that he had received a contract from the United States government for four weight-carrying machines, three of them to be of the hydro type. Mr. Burgess is going to Paris to attend the aeronautical exhibition. Philip Page, one of his birdmen, planned to accompany Burgess part way on his trip in a hydroplane, but the stiff northwest gale prevented this.

HIGH LIVING AND POOR NOURISHMENT

When your food does not nourish you, the blood is thin or impure. Unless the blood is pure, assimilation, the final step of digestion, is imperfectly done and the body poorly nourished. Every day instances of lack of nourishment because of thin or impure blood are seen in children, who eat almost continually yet do not grow; in convalescents from the grip, fever, or some other serious disease, who remain pale, weak and debilitated; in persons who are run down through overwork or worry and are unable to get back their strength.

Before the body can be properly nourished, the blood must first be cleansed, built up and made fit to work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will do this more quickly and effectively than any other medicine. They contain the very elements which the thin blood lacks. Not only do they strengthen the stomach but they build up the blood so that it gets full nourishment from the food.

Mrs. Jennie Temple, of No. 106 North Main street, Fond du Lac, Wis., says:

"I was a great sufferer from stomach trouble, caused by overwork, for about two years. My appetite was very poor and I could not eat much of anything. No matter what I ate, my stomach became sour and gas would form on it, causing shortness of breath and affecting my heart. I had to diet and eat only the lightest food. For months I did not know what a good night's rest meant. I had frequent dizzy spells and would faint at the least excitement. My head ached almost continually and my heart action was slow and irregular. I was weak and thin and in every way was extremely wretched.

"I had begun to despair of getting well until I gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. Before I had taken the pills a month I felt much better, both mentally and physically. My nerves became stronger, my heart action was more steady and the distressing symptoms were lessened. My appetite increased and I soon became well and strong. Since using the pills I have regained my weight. I can truthfully say that I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the very best medicine any person suffering as I did, can take."

Send today for the free booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Pierce's Corn Plasters

are thin and handy to use—they're sure and effective, too

Unlike thick, clumsy felt plasters, Pierce's Corn Plasters do not cause uncomfortable rubbing and crowding in the shoe. And they remove corns where all other plasters, salves or powders fail. The first application gives instant relief. Try one box. If you aren't satisfied with results, tell the druggist—he'll hand you back your money.

10c and 25c a box. Sold by most druggists. But if you cannot conveniently buy them in your neighborhood, send a dime for a small size box to A. F. Pierce Co., Springfield, Mass.

"NO DANGER WHATEVER," SAY PHYSICIANS

SPEECH ROOSEVELT MADE WITH BULLET IN HIS CHEST

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 15.—Here is the speech which Colonel Roosevelt made, after being shot here last evening. He began:

Friends, I shall have to ask you to be as quiet as you can. I do not know whether you fully understand that I have just been shot, but it takes more than that to kill a Bull Moose.

But, fortunately, I had my manuscript (holding up manuscript, showing audience where bullet had gone through,) so you see I was going to make a long speech. And, friends, the hole in it is where the bullet went through, and it probably saved the bullet from going into my heart.

"I'll Try My Best."

The bullet is in me now, so that I cannot make a very long speech. But I will try my best.

And now, friends, I want to take advantage of this incident to say as solemn a word of warning as I know how to my fellow-Americans.

First of all, I want to say this about myself. I have altogether too many important things to think of to pay any heed or feel any concern over my own death.

Now I would not speak to you insincerely within five minutes of being shot. I am telling you the literal truth when I say that my concern is for many other things. It is not in the least for my own life.

"No Man Happier Than I."

I want you to understand that I am ahead of the game, anyway. No man has had a happier life than I have had, a happier life in every way. I have been able to do certain things that I greatly wished to do and I am interested in doing other things.

I can tell you with absolute truthfulness that I am very much uninterested in whether I am shot or not.

It was just as when I was a colonel of my regiment. I always felt that a private was to be excused for feeling at times some pangs of anxiety about his personal safety, but I cannot understand a man fit to be colonel who can pay any heed to his personal safety when he is occupied as he ought to be occupied with the absorbing desire to do his duty.

"Heart and Soul."

I am in this cause with my whole heart and soul. I believe in the Progressive movement—a movement for the betterment of mankind, the movement for making life a little easier for all our people, a movement to try to take the burdens off the man and especially the woman in this country who is most oppressed.

I am absorbed in the success of that movement. I feel uncommonly proud in belonging to that movement.

Friends, I ask you now this evening to accept what I am saying as absolute truth when I tell you I am not thinking of my life or of anything connected with me personally.

I am saying this by way of introduction because I want to say something very serious to our people and especially to the newspapers.

Shows Blood on Shirt.

I don't know who the man was who shot me tonight. He was seized by one of my stenographers, Mr. Martin, and I suppose is in the hands of the police now. He shot to kill me. He shot the bullet I am just to show you. (Colonel Roosevelt then unbuttoned his coat and vest and showed his white shirt badly stained with blood.)

Now, friends, I am going to be as quiet as possible, even if I am not able to give the challenge of the Bull Moose quite as loudly. Now I do not know who he was or what party he represented.

He was a coward. He stood in the darkness in the crowd around the automobile and when they cheered me and I got up to bow, he stepped forward and shot me in the breast.

"Repudiate Slander."

It is a very natural thing that weak and vicious minds should be inflamed to acts of violence by the king of foul mendacity and abuse that have been heaped upon me for the last three months by the papers in the interests, not only of Mr. Deba, but of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Taft.

Friends, I will disown and repudiate any man or any party who attacks with such vile, foul slander and abuse any opponents of any other party.

Now, I wish to say seriously to the speakers and the newspapers representing both the Republican and Democratic and Socialist parties that they cannot, month in and month out, year in and year out, make the kind of slanderous, bitter and malevolent assaults that they have made and not expect that brutal and violent characters, especially when the brutality is accompanied by a not too strong mind, they cannot expect that such natures will be unaffected by it.

"I Don't Care a Rap."

I am not speaking for myself at all. I give you my word I do not care a rap about being shot, not a rap. I have had a good many experiences in my time and this is only one of them. What I do care for is my country.

I wish I were able to impress on our people the duty to feel strongly, but to speak truthfully of their opponents.

I say now, I have never said on the stump one word against any opponent I could not substantiate, and nothing I ought not to have said; nothing that, looking back, I would not say again.

I am all right.

MILWAUKEE ATTACK ROOSEVELT'S TWELFTH TIME NEAR DEATH

The attack upon Colonel Roosevelt in Milwaukee is the twelfth time that he has had a narrow escape from death, or has been in danger of assassination.

October 5, 1903, a man who gave the name of Peter Elliott and his home as Minneapolis, was overpowered by officers on duty at the White House, after he had fired his revolver at them. He said he had called to see President Roosevelt.

October 27, 1905, within an hour of his forty-seventh birthday, Colonel Roosevelt faced death in a collision in the Mississippi, when the steamer on which he was riding crashed with a United Fruit Company boat, sixty miles below New Orleans.

While bear hunting in the Mississippi river bottoms in 1906 the Colonel was attacked by wounded bears and had a narrow escape.

On one occasion, while the Colonel was driving through Lenox, the carriage in which he was riding was struck by an electric car and William Craig, one of the secret service men with the President, was killed.

In 1908 John Coughlin was arrested on the Colonel's premises at Oyster Bay. He had in his possession a loaded revolver and was begging to see the Colonel, then President.

In 1907 a plot to kill the President was unearthed in Cincinnati through the murder of a Hungarian named Kess.

The same year another plot emanating from Newark, N. J., was discovered. This time it was Pennsylvanian anarchists who were aggressors.

In 1906, at Portland, Ore., a Pole was arrested and disclosed a Nihilist plan to kill the President.

During his African tour in 1909 he was charged by a huge lion.

On May 28, 1906, a man named Robert P. Lewis was arrested at the White House following allegations that he had threatened the President's life.

On June 4, 1908, the Colonel was thrown from a horse, which reared and fell backward into Rock Creek. Only the Colonel's throwing himself beyond the heels of the frightened animal saved his life.

DAKOTAN WAS BASHFUL BOY

The coming in of the Supreme Court at East Cambridge today forced the famous Russell will contest back to the old Probate Court room, where the hearing started last July. The bright sunny weather drew quite a crowd to the courtroom today. The crowd was much larger than it has been for several days.

Lawyer William R. Scharton, Fresno Dan and William C. Russell were not present when court opened. Fresno Dan has not been in court for nearly a month.

Attorney Robert Nason continued his cross-examination of the Dakotan. He asked the witness about his shyness as a boy. Dakota Dan stated that he was bashful but he denied that he ever avoided anybody when they came to the house.

"Brother William always ran when visitors came," said the Dakotan.

"After I was twelve years old I was always ready to talk with people who came to visit us."

"Did you go visiting with your father?" asked Attorney Nason.

"Yes, I went many places with him." The witness named various people he and his father had visited.

Do you remember your brother William going anywhere with you and your father?"

"I remember William and I went once to have our picture taken. It was somewhere in Boston, and father went with us."

RETURN $78,707 TAX TO NEW HAVEN ROAD

Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Judicial Court today ordered Elmer E. Stevens, State treasurer, to return $78,707 to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which it paid as excise tax in 1910 on its Park square property. The railroad was taxed on a valuation of $4,000,000 on this property, which it sold to the Park Square Trust. After the sale the Supreme Court ruled that the railroad had no right to sell the property.

ELEVEN JURORS IN ETTOR TRIAL

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Oct. 15.—Court had only been in session eight minutes today when the tenth juror was drawn at the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, who are charged with complicity in the murder of Annie Le Pizzo, an Italian woman, during the textile strike in Lawrence last January. The tenth juror is John N. Carter, forty-seven, a driver, living in Newburyport. Carter was the 419th man called and the second man examined today.

The eleventh juror chosen is George C. Edmunds, lamp-worker, thirty-five, of Amesbury. He was chosen after the proceedings had been in progress ninety minutes.

The first talesman interrogated today was Edwin F. Prescom, a Manchester carpenter, who declared "I am so opposed to capital punishment that I could send no man to the chair." He was excused.

There is every prospect today that Judge Quinn will fill the jury box. He has been five days now seeking jurymen from a total muster of 700 Essex County citizens.

The fifth day of empaneling started with the State having only twenty-two challenges in reserve and the trio of prisoners six each to their credit.

It was learned today that it is costing Essex County $5 a day to feed Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso at the Salem jail. Each meal costs a dollar. Ettor and Caruso are growing fat, but Giovannitti has lost twenty pounds since his arrest six months ago.

From the courtyard today the nine jurors could be seen in shirt sleeves shuffling cards and engaged in spirited matches of checkers and parlor billiards. Others were enjoying themselves with a "pony" bowling alley set up in the room.

STOMACH MISERY JUST VANISHES

Time It! No Indigestion, Gas or Sourness Five Minutes After Taking "Pape's Diapepsin."

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only fifty cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases, then you will understand why dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for indigestion or gastritis or any other stomach misery.

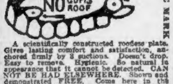

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion.

It is planned to emphasize Governor Wilson's labor record, in the hope of arousing enthusiasm among the rank and file of laboring men of the State.

Wilson Sees Tiger Practise.

PRINCETON, Oct. 15.—Woodrow Wilson took his first walk on the Princeton campus since he became presidential nominee, and for a while shook off the cares of his campaign by assuming the guise of a football coach.

At the football field the sign "secret practice" did not halt the Governor, and soon the nominee was the centre of interest on the sidelines of the gridiron.

The Governor's cousin, FitzJames Woodrow, is a candidate for the team.

SAN BENITO, Tex., Oct. 15.—Old maids of this country are provided for in the will of Miss Mary Philpot, who died there recently. Miss Philpot herself never married, and at her death was worth $100,000. The will instructs her administrators to amply care for all old maids who apply for assistance for a period of two years. The bequest warns against aiding grass widows.

SUNDAY CLOSING LAW EVEN STOPS CLOCK

MARSHALL, Mo., Oct. 15.—Nearly everything but the heart beats of the victims were stopped here with the enforcement of the dust-covered State Sunday closing law. Even the hands of the town clock suffered paralysis shortly after Saturday midnight. Restaurants and drug stores were closed, nothing being sold in the latter except prescriptions authorized by physicians. Sunday newspapers were tabooed.

Outfit for Season Cost Just $140.84, Says Mrs. Wilson

PRINCETON, Oct. 15.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was distressed by a story printed in New York that she had done some lavish shopping in Philadelphia, including the purchase of seven gowns costing $200 to $500 each.

Mrs. Wilson, who prides herself on her economy, said her shopping for the whole season had amounted to just $140.84. She was so upset by the discussion of her private affairs, that when the newspaper correspondents called on Governor Wilson today he gave out the following statement written by Mrs. Wilson:

Returning from a day's shopping in Philadelphia, Mrs. Wilson did remark to a personal friend that she had good fortune, for she had been able to complete all her purchases for the season in one day. Since it appears that her private affairs must be publicly discussed she has consented to give this friend the following list of those purchases:

Two ready made gowns, one hat, one chiffon waist, material to repair old gowns, two pairs of goives. Total, $140.84.

TWO-THIRDS OF REVERE BALLOTS FOR ANNEXATION

The end of town government in Revere is near, and Revere will soon become either a part of Boston or a separate city. This was indicated at a special town meeting when only twenty-three out of 1,021 votes cast were for the retention of the present town government plan. There were 658 votes for annexation to Boston, nearly two-thirds of the total. One hundred and fifty-eight votes were cast for the city charter plan and eighty-five for a commission plan similar to that in use at Lynn and Des Moines.

These plans, with the annexation question, will be submitted to the Legislature for sanction. They will then be placed on the ballot again.

Portrait of Julia Ward Howe Unveiled In Old State House

The memorial portrait of Julia Ward Howe, after a private exhibition in the Copley gallery, on Newbury street, yesterday, was unveiled in the council chamber of the Old State House today.

The portrait is by John Elliott, Mrs. Howe's son-in-law, from sketches made by him about four years before the famous woman's death. Mrs. Howe's intimates declare the picture better even than the one Mr. Elliott has just sent to Cincinnati.

The pose shows the author sitting in her famous little oak chair, with her hands folded. She is dressed in green, and over her shoulders is a lace cape, and over her head a lace cap modeled after the Breton style.

The expression is portraying the mood into which she fell when in absolute repose.

The portrait was made at the suggestion of the Rev. Charles W. Wendte, who is secretary of the memorial fund. At the exercises today, Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, Bishop Lawrence and ex-Governor John D. Long spoke for the Commonwealth, the city and the people who contributed.

YOUNG BROTHER OF EVELYN THAW FAST GETS RICHES MINING

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—Howard Nesbit, twenty-year-old brother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who caused a stir on Broadway for two years and then disappeared, is now in Dawson City, Alaska. He has made a man of himself, as he expressed it, and is accumulating a goodly "pile" placer mining on a claim he shares with one Oleson.

Messages from Nesbit were brought to Pittsburgh by former City Detective Di Fiori. De Fiori says Nesbit appeared in Dawson early in the Summer of last year. He said he was "on the wagon." He has a good start toward wealth. The former dandy is the worst dressed man in town.

PRETTIEST WOMEN ARE PHILADELPHIANS, SAYS FRENCH COUNT

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Count Charles de Chabannes, a French portrait painter, whose statement that Washington women were inartistic in painting their faces, caused much gossip, has just returned here from Europe.

According to the Count, the handsomest women in this country are to be found in Philadelphia. The rare beauty of even the working girls in the Quaker City, he declared, caused him to stop on the street and gaze spellbound at their pretty faces.

"It is quite true that painting the face attractively is a lost art with women," he continued.

MILK BATH NEARLY FATAL FOR FARMER

HAVERHILL, Oct. 15.—Arthur W. Butterick, a farmer of Ayer's Village, was the recipient of an unexpected milk bath, as a result of which he was nearly drowned, and is at present under the care of two doctors. Butterick had forty gallons of milk in his barn, ready for an automatic cooler, when his horse became frightened, and toppled Butterick into the milk.

THOMAS W. LAWSON

Offers the biggest prizes on record for the hard-hitting batters of the RED SOX and GIANTS who can hit the big sign back of left field at Fenway Park during a World's Series game. The sign measures 34 by 21 feet, and includes both Mr. Lawson's offer in plain letters and the representation of the November cover of

EVERYBODY'S

at the right. The $250 prize may be won by a batter who hits any portion of the entire sign; the $1000 belongs to the FIRST batter who hits the "slate" shown on EVERYBODY'S MAGAZINE at the right. The judges to determine what batters qualify for these prizes will be these well-known baseball writers: L. R. Murdoch, Boston American; Paul H. Shannon, Boston Post; T. H. Murnane, Boston Globe, and R. E. McMillin, Boston Herald. Who will be the first heavy hitter to "smash the System's slate"? There are plenty of men on both teams who CAN do it. And there are plenty—aye, millions of everyday citizens in all walks of life who, if they will, can apply and "smash the System's slate," which in plain Lawson-simplified English spells "HIGH-COST LIVING."

"THE REMEDY"

MARY YOUNG AS 'LITTLE QUEEN'

"Such a Little Queen," a delightful comedy in three acts, the work of Channing Pollock, was presented at the Castle Square Theatre last evening by the John Craig Stock Company.

The play is laid in New York, where the dethroned Queen of Herzegovnia is living, absolutely penniless, and is forced to earn her livelihood by the humblest kind of work. She is in love with the King of Bosnia, also an exile.

Robert Trainer, a young American chap, falls deeply in love with the Queen. He is so interested in her that he invites his employer, Adolph Lauman, controller of an enormous beef packing establishment, and his daughter, to see her.

Lauman is very anxious that his daughter should marry a titled foreigner, and when the King of Bosnia makes his appearance, Lauman plans to induce the King to marry his daughter.

His clever ruse is broken up by Robert Trainer, who proves a dear friend to the King and Queen of Herzegovnia in the time of need, and all ends in happiness.

The leading role of Anna Victoria, the Queen of Herzegovnia, was delightfully portrayed by Mary Young. Her accent in the native tongue was excellent and drew much applause from the audience.

Wilson Melrose as the King of Bosnia received a greeting equal to that which marked his return to Boston last week. Donald Meek in the part of Robert Trainer, a self-made American, was a hit. The humorous side fell to George Henry Trader and Al Roberts, who acted Raoul Cosaca and Nathaniel Quigg respectively.

Next Week's Bills.

Blanche Ring in "The Wall Street Girl" will come to the Tremont next Monday.

"The Man of the Hour" will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

"The Deep Purple" will be the attraction at the St. James Theatre next week.

Mrs. Langtry in "Helping the Cause" will be the head-line feature at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week.

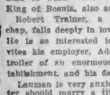

New Palace Theatre.

Real Italian war pictures pulled a big crowd to the Palace Theatre yesterday. Not since the Italians and Turks began their conflict in Tripoli has there been any film exhibited in this city that shows more clearly just what gruelling, hostilities look like. This new film has more than 4,000 feet of actual war scenes and shows in many details the horrors and hardships forced upon teh two armies. Besides the war pictures there were a number of other attractive picture subjects and a new list of illustrated songs.

JESSIE BUSLEY HIT AT KEITH'S

Some genuine department store comedy around which is twined a few real heart throbs served to introduce Jessie Busley in the feature act at Keith's this week.

The little comedy is intensely human, well acted and abounds in lines that give "Miss Bik," the specialty salesgirl, the fullest opportunity to display her capabilities as a legitimate comedienne and as emotional actress.

The surrounding bill would be hard to surpass. Addy Kelley has some Irish stories that are new and that are put over with the quaint talent of the real Celt.

McDavitt, Kelly and Lucey, a new team with a new sketch, "The Piano Movers," introduce some trick piano playing interspersed with eccentric dancing, that goes from the start to the finish.

The Five Musical Lassies blend good looks with harmony and render a medley of pieces that demonstrates their versatility with musical instruments. They are exceptionally good with the brasses. Bert Leray always makes good with his artistic and clever work with the pencil, and the new features of his act make it even more entertaining and timely. Two good voices make the act of Coombs and Caldwell, newcomers to Boston, one of the best singing acts in vaudeville.

The program says the Tom Davies Trio will make you hold your breath, and the program is right. It is one of the most thrilling motorcycle acts that could be conceived for presentation on the stage, and it well deserved the applause it received. Miller and Mack in songs and dances, Montambo and Wells in comedy acrobatics, and the Pathe Weekly round out a most entertaining bill.

"Disraeli" a Delight to Playgoers

George Arliss Scores in Title Role

GEO. ARLISS AS DISRAELI, MARGARET DALE AS MRS. TRAVERS, AT THE PLYMOUTH

Play That Ran Year In New York Drawn Big House at Plymouth.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Nothing could be sweeter to an actor than the way the audience at the Plymouth last evening gathered "Disraeli" and Mr. George Arliss into its arms. No audience of the season has given itself more enjoyment in one short evening, and it may be accepted as probable that the new drama on Eliot street will continue on good terms with play-goers for some weeks to come.

"Disraeli" may have been accepted on faith, for there are none so bold as to venture serious criticism on an entertainment that remained on its feet in New York for a solid season. To be sure, we had a right to expect something unusual and attractive from Mr. Arliss—and he gave it to us. His acting of the statesman who directed the affairs of England in the seventies will stand without assistance as a wonderfully artistic creation. Whether he was true to the great leader Mr. Louis N. Parker attempted to honor in his play is a small matter when you consider that Mr. Arliss made him a supreme and delicious by human character in the play. Mr. Parker has apologized for the liberties he has taken with history in writing "Disraeli," but Mr. Arliss need not bear indulgence or feel any regrets at his own part in the play.

Held Audience in Hand.

Always keen to the subtle and delicate touches that make character drawing impressive and worth while, Mr. Arliss held last evening's audience in the palm of his hand. You may have thought him more of a comedian than a statesman, but that did not free you from the grip he held on your attention and your sympathies. Mr. Arliss gave a performance that will be remembered.

They treated serious things lightly in those mid-Victorian days in England. You found the great Disraeli a man of splendid humor and something of a punster. He turned the problems of state into comic situations and took open-faced boys into his most important service. He was a merry wag, and you may be sure that Mr. Arliss did not fail to get full value from every bright line in the manuscript.

What doubts you may have had for the play when it suddenly shifted from comedy to melodrama, with intriguing women and many bits of side play that reminded you of the drama of yesterday, were not to be regarded seriously, or you were instantly reassured by the audience, which surrendered itself completely and willingly to the old-fashioned moments and situations. Everything was taken on its face value—a tribute which Mr. Arliss may enjoy when he thinks it over.

In spite of his admirable performance Mr. Arliss might be asked to explain why he ventured into so much extravagance in his facial make-up. The fingers that applied the grease paint were not as deft or subtle as the lips that read the lines.

Well Supported.

Supporting Mr. Arliss brought grave responsibilities to several men and women. Marguerite St. John as Disraeli's wife, gave an intelligent and sympathetic performance, and Violet Heming was a gushing ingenue, attractive to the eye, at least. Margaret Dale gave the doubtful Mrs. Travers skillful treatment in a melodramatic way, and the Charles Deeford of Arthur Eldred was all that the gallery had for its own. His return from a triumphant diplomatic trip to Egypt was like the home-coming of the Red Sox, showing that both actors and audiences have soft hearts for popular winners.

"Disraeli" brings to the Plymouth Theatre one of the most artistic performances of a generation, and Mr. Arliss contributes generously to the success that will keep the play in town for many weeks.

'ON THE LEVEL' AT ST. JAMES

"How's to the eyes of the bride-to-be
That never a fault in him may see,
And how's to the lips of the bride-to-be
That ever may sip sweet constancy;
And the last for the heart of the bride-to-be
Where he alone dwelleth eternally."—

(Toast given in first act by Mr. Hawley.)

How a good woman's love can save a man about to commit suicide is outlined this week at the St. James Theatre, Huntington avenue by Miss Ethel Grey Terry, who impersonates the character of Nell Evans in Richard Madden's four-act play, "On the Level."

Theodore Friebus, who takes the part of Ned Varney, a bank clerk, is the man, and about him sweep the scenes and incidents that make the play a thriller from start to finish. Mr. Friebus fits to a nicety.

The play rivets the attention of the audience throughout. It is replete with humor, satire, pathos, and unravels a plot true to life.

In the cast of the play, as produced by the St. James Theatre Company and staged by Will H. Gregory, are Charles Abbe, Miss Marguerite Bourne, Theodore Friebus, Miss Ethel Grey Terry, Dudley Hawley, Miss Beth Franklyn, Miss Bella Calres and Sydney Riggs. All are well known to Boston audiences.

Dudley Hawley as Thomas Quincy Gerard, and Miss Beth Franklyn as Cora Whitely, shared the honors of the evening with Miss Terry and Mr. Friebus.

If Your Voice Gets In, You Win

A Palmer (Mass.) subscriber told this story:

"I got word of a possible big contract in Western New York, packed my grip, and started on the night train. All next day I waited around that city, trying to see the head of the firm. He was busy—busy. I couldn't get at him. When night came I went home disgusted.

"As my eyes rested on the telephone in my office, next morning, I said to myself: 'Wonder if you couldn't get me into that office—get my voice where I can't go myself?'

"It could and did. Within a half hour from the time I put in the call, I was awarded the contract."

The announcement of a long-distance call usually will secure a hearing. Many busy men prefer to transact business by telephone. It enables them to concentrate, to escape the influence of personality, and to make judicial decisions.

The 2 Great Essentials of Food

1st: Taste No matter how nourishing a food may be it must taste good. If it doesn't, it won't coax the digestive juices into action; and if it doesn't do that the nourishment in the food will pass through the body unassimilated.

2nd: Cooking No matter how nourishing a food may be, if it requires cooking it must be properly cooked. Cooking brings about chemical changes, without the aid of which the digestive juices cannot perform their task.

POLLOCK'S STORY OF TODAY'S GREAT CONTEST

ATTRIBUTES TALK OF NEW YORK "FRAME-UP" TO THE LITTLE "TINHORN" SPORTS.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

CLEM. POLLOCK

FENWAY PARK, Oct. 15.—When I reached Boston from New York today I was shocked to hear repeated time after time on the street, in hotel corridors and cafes the statement that yesterday's game was a frame-up.

In other words, according to this story, the Speed Boys gave the game to the Giants.

Now, I am not a baseball writer, but I have had a great many years' experience as a newspaper reporter. This means meeting and studying men. It means seeing through subterfuges and fakes. It means penetrating the disguise of crooks.

I want to say out of my experience and from a heart that believes that the world is not all bad that any story to the effect that yesterday's game was "framed up" or that the Red Sox "laid down" is a PREPOSTEROUS LIE.

RED SOX ALL MEN OF CHARACTER.

I am sorry that it seems necessary to make an argument to sustain the statement that I have made. But there are so many people who call themselves "sports," and who probably lost as much as $2 on yesterday's game, declaring brazenly that the Red Sox threw yesterday's game, that anything which would counteract such an atrocious story is justifiable.

To look at the matter from the mere meretricious standpoint of mony, the Red Sox would not have "laid down." It is known now, been known since the fourth game was played, how much money was to be distributed among the players.

Each player in the winning team gets about $4,100. Each player in the losing team gets about $2,600.

The winning of the championship yesterday meant to every Red Sox participant $1,500 more than if it were lost. Is there any sane man who thinks that any one of those boys would throw $1,500 away?

But there is more to this thing than money—there is character. And I want to say right here—and I want to say with all the force that type is capable of expressing—that the young men who comprise the Boston American base ball team are men of character.

Day of Bully Has Passed.

If there is any tinhorn sport who does not think so, let him approach one of them with a crooked proposition, and I'll wager that, in the parlance of the street, he will get his block knocked off with neatness and dispatch.

The day of the bully has passed in baseball and in every other realm of activities. Once when the game was being played a man with a vile tongue could approach a player at a tight pinch and fluster him by a vocal attack that would shame decency.

That's gone by like many other iniquities of the past. It will never show its pestiferous head again.

I would like to say under my signature that any man who circulates, or helps to circulate, the report that I reluctantly discuss is a man whose chief characteristic is IGNORANCE.

Now that I have got this off my system, ladies and gentlemen, we have with us today the Giants. Some boys, those Giants. I said so yesterday, you will remember. They fight to the finish, and by that same token I think today's their finish.

It is a grand day. October smiles. Tonight when the sun goes down I think that Boston will also smile.

Great Drop to Diamond.

I came out to Fenway Park shortly before noon. The sun shot into the green field and gave vitality to the dying grass. It gleamed on the plates that corner the diamond. It illuminated the flag that flutters from the tall pole across the field from me and brought out clearly the letters on the Red Sox pennants that swing in the air at other points.

Clouds cluster here and there—smoky-centered, silver-edged. But through them and around them are shot the golden lances of Old Sol, for whom I have written azteckian praise for a week. I write about the sky because I can see more of it from my altitudious eerie in Fenway Park than of anything else. What has the sky to do with a baseball game? Oh; well, I'll explain that some time after the series. But it has.

Now, to come down to earth. The diamond is in first-class shape. The alert caretakers have shot a hose snakelike over the field to lay the dust on the barren spaces. The whitewashed boundary lines, mathematical in precision, all right angles, sparkle in the clear light.

Crowds Filing In.

The wind is fresh. It sweeps over the field, gathering the dust and swirling in spiral columns. It makes the flag and pennants flap, straining at the cords that hold them. It shoots through the aerial press stand and flutters copy paper with reckless disregard of the feelings of the great reading public. It may have some effect on ball playing, but I don't know just what that will be.

There will not be any dust on the diamond—that is one safe bet, because an energetic young man has sprinkled it thoroughly.

As I write, at a quarter after 12, the pavilion at the right of the grandstand is almost filled. In the bleachers just beyond and in the right field there are scarcely a hundred, but the centrefield bleachers are almost black with enthusiastic fans. The space in the leftfield bleachers, left by the loyal, royal rooters, is jammed. In the grandstand are a few. A young man with a handsomely-garbed woman was the first arrival.

They sit directly back of first base. She is a symphony in brown.

It is plain to see by the outbursts that leap from the mouths of the gathered fans, and are swept across the city by the invigorating breezes, that all appreciate that this is the real critical game of the series.

Tris and Jerry Arrive.

I am not much of a dopester, and, besides, what's the use? In a very few hours the afternoon tale will be told. It may be a story of prowess such as Longfellow chronicled at the Wayside Inn—a tale that will live in song and story. As to that, we shall see.

Into the grounds walk two valorous, valiant, and, I trust, valedictorian friends. They are Tris Speaker and Jerry McCarthy. Jerry shoots a few swift ones, and the great left-handed batter lands on them gently. Tris, I should judge, is eager to land some of his bullets in the bleachers today. He has been rather shy on that of late, but wait—I'll be writing baseball in a minutes, and that's barred.

A dozen or so more of the Speed Boys have just tripped on to the ground. They look clean, healthy, hearty and hopeful in their white clothes. Also, believe me, they are determined. I'd bet, if I were a betting man, on the Red Sox today.

At 12:30 the red-socked athletes are batting out the ball and most of them have a penchant for putting the spheroid into the assembled multitude in the bleachers. Judging from what I can see and not having any definite information on the subject, I should say that the speedy gentlemen had tabasco on their ham and eggs today. Not since the series began have I seen such hot tamale ante-game stuff.

Rooters' Place Gone.

An hour before the game starts there are 10,000 fans on the ground. It is the most discriminating crowd yet. They watch the plays, applaud good ones, and boo-hoo bad ones. The royal rooters are out of it. The space that has been reserved for them is already filled.

The grandstand is filling. That flower bed to the left of Duffy Lewis' Cliff is taking on color as though kissed by Autumn's lips. Women, gayly, patriotically bedecked, sprinkle the serried seats. seats.

It is three-quarters of an hour before the game. The bleachers are filled. The grandstand is taking on activity. The Red Sox are at batting practice. Little Jerry McCarthy won a salvo of applause by catching a long centre-field fly.

The game today is to be a fast one. The verve of the players, the zest of the weather, the crisis of the contest, all proclaim it.

Giants at Practice.

The clouds have begun team work. They have shut out the sun. The breeze whistles with a November whine. The aspect is gray, meteorologically.

The cars are coming packed. At a guess I should say that there will be 30,000 people here today.

The Giants have taken the diamond for batting and fielding practice. They are doing their favorite stunt—knockin 'em into the bleachers. Our old college chum, Joe Wood, will attend to that later.

The grand stand fills slowly. That doesn't mean a lack of interest in the game but delay over buying new tickets. At this time, 1:45, the bleachers are jammed, but the grand stand only about three-quarters filled. Many people will be disappointed in not seeing the initial innig today.

The Boston royal rooters didn't get beyond the centrefield fence today. They probably were unable to reserve the seats they had previously occupied. They massed against the fence and held aloft their banner, proclaiming their identity. The rooters, playing that inane, insane, in-vain, feminine frivolity, "Tessie," marched around to their former seats. They didn t get them. They stood, hanging over the rails.

The game is on.

As I have previously suggested—and my dope has been good—see Br. Murdoch and Mr. Mitchell for the plays.

NEWBURYPORT POLICE FIGHT MAYOR BURKE

NEWBURYPORT, Oct. 18.—Mayor Burke, City Marshal McLean and the Board of Aldermen have been served with notice to appear in Supreme Judicial Court at Boston, October 22, and show why a writ should not be issued ordering them to approve the claims of policemen for pay during vacations. The Aldermen passed an order to the effect over a veto, and several of the officers took vacations. When they came to get their pay, however, they found that Mayor Burke had taken their names off the payrolls.

MAYOR BARRY RAPS BANNER OF I. W. W.

Mayor Barry of Cambridge sent a telegram to the Lawrence city clerk today on the lesson taught by the patriotic demonstration in the Mill City, Columbus Day. The Mayor telegraphed as follows: "Patriotism in Massachusetts can and will be awakened when godless agitators, anarchists at heart, attempt to lead their followers to revolution. The sign 'No God, No Master,' should never be permitted to take the place of 'In God We Trust.' The Commonwealth of Massachusetts stands for God and order."

SCHEPPS BACKS UP ROSE'S TALE

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Sam Schepps, one of the State's "big four" witnesses and alleged paymaster of the gunmen who slew Herman Rosenthal, was the star witness today at the trial of Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, the police official charged with instigating the assassination of Rosenthal.

Schepps, who fled after the murder and was captured at Hot Springs, Ark., was called to corroborate the stories of Jack Rose and Louis Webber that Becker plotted the death of Rosenthal because he "squealed" on Becker's grafting.

While Schepps was kept waiting in an anteroom before taking the stand, police and detectives inspected the crowd in the corridors of criminal courts building for gangsters.

Mrs. Becker was one of the earlier arrivals and smiled cheerfully at her husband as he entered the room. Becker looked worn and haggard.

When Schepps was called to the stand Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss at once plunged into the same story that Rose and Webber had related.

Schepps is Dapper.

Schepps looked dapper and well groomed. He had grown stout in prison and was dressed with considerable ornament. He gave his occupation as a portrait enlarger.

He said he had known Rose about eighteen years and that he had met Becker first at the Lafayette baths and when Becker raided the rooms of the Sam Paul Association. Later he acted as messenger between Becker and Rose.

"I was at the home of Dora Gilbert, Rosenthal's first wife, on July 15 last," testified Schepps. "I was asked to go there for Becker and get an affidavit and I did it to accommodate Rose. Harry Vallon and Rose went with me.

"Afterwards we drove up to a number in Seventh avenue and got 'Dago Frank' Cirofici into the car; then went to Webber's gambling place at Sixth avenue and Forty-second street. Later I left and some time early in the morning of the sixteenth, while I was drinking a soda in the Times square drug store, I heard four shots nearby. I ran toward the Metropole, for the shots sounded like they had been there. I saw a crowd collecting where a body was lying on the pavement.

"I ran into Harry Vallon at the Elks Club and we went to Fourteenth street, where we lived, and remained there the balance of the night.

About 7 o'clock, Jack Rose woke me up. 'Lefty Louie' Rosenberg, 'Dago Frank' Cirofice "Whitey" Lewis and "Gib the Blood" were with him. They wanted to know where I would meet them with the money. I replied at Fiftieth street and Eighth avenue.

Pays Gunmen.

"At the hour we had agreed on, we met at Fiftieth street and Eighth avenue, where Rose passed over the money to 'Lefty Louie.' I did not have it. After that we went to the home of Harry Pollok, the sporting promoter, on Riverside Drive. I stayed there all day, going that night to Lieutenant Becker's apartments at the request of Rose. I told Becker that Rose was sick and worried and wanted to know what would be done for him.

"Becker said: 'You tell him not to worry. I'll fix everything all right. They have to prove who killed Rosenthal before they can convict any one.' I started to light a cigarette but Becker detained me saying: 'Don't make a light here. They have been trailing me all day.'

"Becker wanted to know if the gunmen had been paid and I told him they had. Then I went back to Pollok's where I found Lawyer John W. Hart.

This concluded the direct examination. John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for the defence, began cross-examination. Mr. McIntyre attacked the witness' character, but most of District Attorney Whitman's objections were sustained by Justice Goff.

Schepps finally admitted that he was once an opium smuggler in the Northwest, carrying the drug across the Canadian border.

AN OPEN LETTER

By MORTON BIRGE

DEAR BOSTON:
I'm feeling some hazy. I've just returned home from a trip,
A jaunt where I saw Mister Muggsy McGraw. Believe me, that guy is too flip.
We went for a stroll in Manhattan. His gang jumped me quick from behind,
And what that bunch did to your innocent kid was most impolite and unkind.

Of course, I was ready for trouble—at least that was what I had said—
But not what I drew from that Manhattan crew. It's lucky today I'm not dead.
They basted me "sump'in" atrocious. They banged me all over the lot.
The Indian sign was the answer for mine. Oy yoy, such a headache I got!

But, BOSTON, if you're not too busy—a tip for yourself—keep it dark.
Just drop out my way a bit later today. You know where I am, Fenway Park.
I'm expecting to meet a young party. My pockets are stuffed full of rocks,
And Mis-ter Gi-ant will be taught that he can't get fresh with ME.

EDUCATE WEST TO EASTERN CONDITIONS, URGES A. E. FEELY

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 15.—Forty textile manufacturers of Rhode Island listened to Judge Ambrose E. Feely, of Woonsocket, himself a manufacturer, tell some plain things at the first meeting of the Tariff Publicity League.

Judge Feely, with United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt at his elbow, bluntly declared that Woodrow Wilson would be elected President, that the Republicans didn't know what they wanted on the tariff, and that the thing that should be done was to educate the West and South to New England conditions, that all parts of the country might work on tariff matters with mutual interest.

"The West doesn't care whether there are any industries in New England or not. What they want is to buy their goods cheaper, and if they can buy them abroad any cheaper by taking off the tariff, off that tariff will come. I don't know as I can really blame those people. If they have their way there will be nothing for New Englanders to do but to go West," said Judge Feely.

DODGE TELLS OF PRINCETON FUND

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Cleveland H. Dodge of New York city, who was accredited by William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, with having collected a fund of $85,000 for the pre-convention campaign of Governor Wilson, was the first witness before the Clapp committee today. He attributed to the fraternal spirit of the famous class of '79 at Princeton the cause of many members of that class rallying to Governor Wilson's support with large sums of money, and confirmed in every detail the story told by McCombs as to how the fund was raised.

Aside from this fund, the only campaign contribution of which Mr. Dodge had knowledge was a small contribution made by him to the Republican National Committee in 1908.

LOSES LIFE IN DYE WORKS FIRE

Michael Hines of No. 338 Tremont street, aged twenty-nine, died at the City Hospital today as a result of injuries received during a fire at the Roxbury works of the Boston Dye House Company shortly after midnight. George Buchanan of No. 9 Chesterfield street, aged forty and married, also was burned about the hands and back, but is expected to recover.

Hines and Buchanan were at work in the dye room, on naptha-soaked garments, when the fire broke out. They attempted to extinguish the flames, which later destroyed the building at No. 139 Norfolk avenue. Hines' death and the severe burning of Buchanan could have been avoided had they attempted to save themselves instead of trying to prevent the spread of the flames and save the building.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

In PICTORIAL REVIEW for November

begins one of the greatest series of love letters ever written

These letters were written by a Confederate General to his future wife. Composed in the thick of the struggle, they will go down in history as the tenderest memory of the great war between the States. They touch our memories of the lost cause like a roseleaf on the graves where lie

"Under the sod and the dew waiting the Judgment Day
Under the laurel the Blue under the willow the Gray."

The four years' struggle between North and South is over; the knightly hand that penned these letters is forever at rest. Yet, as you read the letters, you hear once more the thunder of artillery, the scream of shot and shell; you catch a glimpse of the great soldier's sweetheart wife in her desolate home. In these letters the Confederate General unlocked his heart.

"Even now," he wrote three days after Gettysburg, "I can hear them cheering as I give the order, 'Forward.' I can feel the thrill of their joyous voices all along the line. Oh how faithfully they kept their word—following me on—on to their death. I can't write you a love letter today, my darling . . . . it seems sacrilegious almost to say I love you, with those hearts that are stilled to love. Your Soldier."

Who was this man—bravest of soldiers, most chivalrous of lovers?

Read the Letters in

and you will know; but we are pledged not to tell you his name, for the noble woman who inspired his devotion is still living, and now after fifty years has permitted PICTORIAL REVIEW to give them to the world.

Northerner and Southerner alike will respond to the thrill of these letters—human documents of a kind never written before, never to be written again.

This series of great love letters begins in PICTORIAL REVIEW for November

Odds and Ends of Notes and News on Fenway Park Struggle.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

FENWAY PARK, Oct. 15.—Conditions for the selling of grandstand seats were today somewhat different from those of the first three games here, inasmuch as those who held tickets for the first games were forced to secure tickets before noon today or forfeit their rights to their regular seats.

Those who bought tickets for the first three games were given preference today. Lines formed very early. Those who patronized the unreserved sections were on hand early and an hour before the game began the stands surrounding the outfield were about full.

Grandstand Ticket Work Slower.

There was more delay in handling the grandstand applicants as the process of handling the tickets was much slower. Two lines outside the grandstand extended from the box offices away out to and around the street corner.

At 12:15 the first of the Red Sox players came on the field for practice and soon the whole bunch was carvorting. The batting practice was fierce—actually fierce. They made Buck O'Brien, who lasted only one inning yesterday, go in the box and serve curve balls to them and the sound of the sockdolager was loud in the land.

Speaker, Duffy Lewis, Gardner, Hall, Hooper, Xerkes and other long-distance cloisters outdid themselves. The line drives they whacked up against the fences were things of beauty and joys forever. Unfortunately it was only practice.

High Wind Blowing.

There was a high wind blowing. It kept the flags and pennants cracking merrily. The direction of the wind was across the diamond which, it was figured out, would hinder rather than aid the pitchers.

At the back of the grandstand the wind had a clear sweep. It sang through the vast structure and whistled a requiem through the gray fire escapes of Boston's oldest fan, Mr. Horace Greenfield, who had to be content with a seat in the last row, where he received the full benefit of the wind.

Joe Burns, the Taunton bonifacer and amateur umpire, was again on hand, free of remorse for the past and hope for the future. Landlord urns hasn't missed a game thus far. That defeat for the Red Sox on the Polo Grounds was nearly the undoing of Mr. Burns, but he bobbed up for the 1 o'clock and had two whole minutes to spare.

Crowd Gets Officer's "Goat" with Its "Hep! Hep! Hep!"

A captain of police, or a sergeant of police. (It was impossible to tell from the press box), started to walk across the field early in the day.

The bleacher crowds accompanied his footsteps with a concerted "Hep, hep, hep," and the binocoat endeavored to change his step. Nothing doing. The crowd changed too, and the officer grew so red in the face that he burned a path across the outfield.

Cheers Greet the Giants.

At 12:45 the Giants appeared and were received with cheers. They had to wait more than half an hour before the Red Sox would allow them a chance at batting practice. But when they did take a whack at the ball they lost several in the crowds at left field just to show they had no cobwebs in their eyes.

Joe Quirk Gets Enough.

Joe Quik, the Red oSx trainer, took a turn at first base while the Giants were batting before the game. Wilbert Robinson, the old Baltimorce atcher and McGraw's side partner, undertook to cover second. He fielded a hard one to Quirk, and the trainer said heh ad enough.

Charlie Hall Rolls 'Em with One Hand.

The writer was nosing around the Red Sox bench an hour before the game, when Charlie Hall asked for the makings. The Sea Lion thereupon deftly rolled a cigarette with one hand, at la the chap in "The Round Up."

"It's a cinch with brown paper," declared Hall. "but somewhat more difficult with white rice paper. Come around next Spring and I'll teach you the trick. There won't be time this season, for this will be the last game, you know, and I am going to duck right back to California."

Here's a Good Bet.

I spied Joe Wood leaning against the foul rail.

"How are you feeling, Joe?"

"Fine and dandy."

That's good enough to bet on.

Grounds Nearly Perfect.

The grounds were in nearly perfect condition. The diamond was dry and firm. Attendants squirted the hose on the dirt surrounding the greensward to keep the dust down.

Royal Rooters Have to Stand.

The Royal Rooters came in through the hole in centrefield at 1:45 o'clock. They had their band with them but they had no seats. There was a mixup somewhere and that portion of Duffyville that had been reserved for them at previous games was crabbed up by just plain, common, everyday fans who had paid third little old $2 for the privilege of viewing the game. The rooters were too late, that was all. They had to stand up.

WILLIAMS TO WORK THE FORWARD PASS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Oct. 15.—Coach Daly gave the Williams regulars a rest from scrimmage this afternoon but he gave them a good hard signal drill before ordering a real battle between the second team and the freshmen. Signal practice was largely devoted to the forward pass formations which created such a sensation in the Stadium last Saturday. The varsity's work lacked snap but they should fully recover from the effects of the Harvard game by tomorrow.

Eyre, a senior, was tried at center for the first time, replacing Farness and Hewlett who have not done particularly brilliant work at that position. Eyre made a good impression, showing up particularly well on the defense. The seconds had little difficulty with the freshmen, who worked such havoc with the varsity last week. Towlan got in the scrimmage and shared honors with Hunnewell. On both offense and defense the second team showed marked improvement.

HARVARD MEN GET LONG DRILL

A cool night wind was the thing that finally signalled Coach Haughton's tired proteges to stop the grilling practice that kept them on the gridiron the better part of the afternoon. The day was cool enough to allow harder practice, although even at that the men were pretty tired when the session was over. The mass of attention was put on the scrubs, a large amount of assorted red pepper being instilled into them for allowing the Williams team to work the same play on them five times in succession in the game last Saturday, and without their catching on in time to block it.

The squad suffered today from the absence of Brickley, the famous drop-kicker who has broken into the varsity squad in the shortest time on record. Storer, Wendell, Erlend and Dana of the scrubs were likewise given a layoff, on account of slight injuries. The game last Saturday, although by no means weak, left much to be desired in the way of line development, and contrary to every one's expectation, left a large hole in the squad from injuries. Dana is one of the fastest substitutes that Haughton has got, and Storer was already taken for granted as a varsity lineman. Neither of these men expect to be out of the game for long.

Something even more important has happened in the way of recruits. Emery, the light but speedy second team centre, has been taken on to the varsity squad, largely in recognition of his fast work on the lower team. Previously, Farnsworth has practically had to hold down the pivot position himself, unaided, and Coach Haughton wished this year to do as he has done in times past, and develop at least three men available for each position. The change brings a man to the squad who will be worth even more at later times than he is now, and every one is glad to see this boy boosted.

Driscoll, who has been out for a week from injuries received in the Holy Cross game, was back in the line-up today, much to the relief of every one. When he did not start last Saturday, everybody feared a fearsome sigh, but the guard candidate appears to have recovered all right. Maguire of the subs was likewise given light practice and will enter the scrimmages in earnest tomorrow or next day.

Players Ask for More Money

"Matty" Acts for Both Teams

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

"Christy" Mathewson of the Giants, acting as the representative of both the New York team and the Red Sox, conferred with President Garry Herrmann of the National Commission and President Thomas Lynch of the National League today at the Copley-Plaza Hotel regarding the request of both teams for more money in the world's series games.

Mathewson told Herrmann and Lynch that what the players wanted was a share of the receipts for the first five games, to make up for the tie game last Wednesday, which was played off on Thursday. Under the rules the teams share in the receipts only of the first four games.

NOT IN COMMISSION'S JURISDICTION.

The conference lasted fifteen minutes. Chairman Herrmann declared the matter was entirely out of the hands of the commission.

"The commission is the creature of the two big leagues formulated the world's series' rules and the National Commission is simply following out these rules. The matter is entirely out of the hands of the National Commission."

The meeting followed a decision reached by the Giants and Red Sox, on the train over from New York last night. The players appointed Mathewson and Bill Carrigan a committee to represent them in laying the request for more money in the series before the National Commission.

At 10 o'clock today, the hour set for the conference, Carrigan had not showed up, so Mathewson, representing both teams, went to the National Commission's headquarters in Boston. After the conference he reported the result to the Giants, and later to the Red Sox.

Hanbold Talks of Big Athletic Mixup

Ernest Haubold, vice-president of the New York Athletic Club, declared himself in the following terms regarding the mixup between the athletic and social factions of the organization recently: "The trouble, such as it is, has been caused by the resentment of a few members at the efforts of the Board of Governors to control certain athletic members of the club. These members seem to feel that they were not under any obligation to settle their dues and house accounts, just as other members, and some of the minor officers championed them and declared they were being persecuted. The idea was to create the impression that the club was verging more toward the social than the athletic aspect. This is manifestly absurd, because there never was a time when the athletic features of the club were given greater consideration."

Expect Record Crowd at the Arena Today

Preparations have been made to handle the tremendous crowd which will flock to the Arena today to see the Red Sox-Giants game played on the big electric score board.

Every play will be shown on the big electric board. Direct wires run from the press stand at Fenway Park to the Arena and the Boston AMERICAN baseball experts are on the business end of the wires.

There will be a band to play between innings. Then, of course, you can smoke, just the same as at a regular ball park.

The game is called at 2 p. m.

DELENDA EST CARTHAGO

MELVIN WILLIAMS

All of us who have not forgotten our Latin quotations can recall the famous words of Cato, the elder.

You know how history tells of his resonant voice, heard in the Roman Senate, year after year. Now this great matter of public policy—now another question to be decided.

But regardless of the question of the hour—for 20 years the Greatest statesman of his time ended his every speech with the prophetic command to the Senate of Rome:

"Delenda est Carthago," which translated meant, "Carthage must be destroyed!"

He saw the menace to Rome. He realized the growing strength of the people of Carthage. He knew that they were massing vast armies under skilled generals. He feared for the supremacy of the Roman Empire.

Carthage was destroyed—but the delay cost Rome millions in wealth and hundreds of thousands in armed men.

The only time to do the right thing is right now—whether it be destroying a city or catching a train. Delays are dangerous.

For over 20 years the firm of Gale & Kent has been sending a message to the men of Greater Boston from 96 Court Street.

The message reads: "We make the best suits and overcoats in New England, at $15 to $25."

Thousands have listened to the message. Thousands of men get their clothes at Gale & Kent's tailor shop—every year.

But the message is for you, too—the man who is reading this advertisement.

For years you have read the advertising—for years it has been dinned into your ears. You are like the Roman Senators listening to Cato.

It has ceased to impress you.

Wake up! The message is true. Gale & Kent are waiting for your order. At 96 Court Street are designers, cutters and tailors who will destroy your prejudice against the prices of $15 to $25.

If you will only give them the chance, they will convince you that Gale & Kent make better suits (or overcoats) for $15 to $25 than other tailors can make for $30 to $40. This $15 saving is yours. It comes out of the firm's saving in rent—light—and insurance.

I can't send out a subpena to get you. There is no legal compulsion. But if $15 means anything to you, I shall expect to see you answer the message in person at once.

Here is the place. Don't put off your visit another day!

JAKE STAHL

DOPES OUT PLAN OF ATTACK BEFORE GAME

HAS PULLED MANY A GAME OUT OF THE FIRE BY TIMELY BATTING

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

A. H. C. MITCHELL

Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, is so different from John McGraw, manager of the Giants, that a comparison, except along certain lines, is out of the question.

Jake outclasses John in height, reach and weight and as a straightforward, man-to-man leader of men. Both have won pennants in their respective leagues, but their methods of accomplishing this much-to-be-desired achievement are as unlike as could be imagined. McGraw's tactics have been described in the AMERICAN. He is, as was stated, 50 per cent. of the New York team. Without him they would be powerless and would slump to the bush league class.

COULD WIN WITHOUT STAHL.

Stahl could quit the Red Sox and the team would keep on winning. This is not meant to reflect on Stahl's ability. In fact it is a compliment to say that he has so imbued his players with his manliness and his get there spirit and his system of making each man rely on himself, at the same time pulling with the others, that he could go away for a spell and the team would do nearly if not quite so well as if he were with them constantly.

All this is provided of course, that the Red Sox could secure a first baseman to bat and field in the high class manner of [illegible] Jake. McGraw directs every single move of his players in the field. Stahl does not. McGraw is on the coaching line every inning that the Giants are at bat. Stahl seldom goes on the coaching lines. McGraw tells his batters what to do before every ball is pitched. Stahl allows the players to decide for themselves. McGraw rules with an iron hand. Stahl gets what he wants by using a soft glove. One rules by harshness, the other by kindness, manliness, good nature.

Players Respect Him.

Stahl's great success this year has been due to the fact that the players respect him and would give up their—baseball lives for him. McGraw commands obedience with the lash. When Stahl censures a player he does just as a big, good natured, earnest leader of men would do. When McGraw would call down a player he does it with a sneer and a snarl, as a trainer of wild animals.

Stahl leads his men. McGraw drives them. Stahl would plead with an erring member of his team. McGraw would wield the lash. Stahl was a great foot ball player in his undergraduate days. He learned implicit obedience in college. He leads his men as a football captain leads his players, who are supposedly gentlemen. McGraw leads his as an East Side gang leader would lead his rough necks.

Red Sox Steadier.

The two leaders, whose methods are so widely different, are appearing on the baseball stage every day, trying to outguess and outplay each other. The teams are evenly matched. If anything, the Giants appear to have more dash than the Red Sox. It is McGraw's dash that is transplanted into his men. The Red Sox appear to be the steadier and more solid set of men.

It is the steadiness and the solidness of Stahl which he has imbued into their systems. It is a great thing for baseball to have such a man as Stahl connected with it. There is no bluster or cockiness about Big Jake.

McGraw Great Baseball Man.

Stahl's players respect him as they would respect a manly big brother. McGraw's players respect him as a cage of snarling tigers respect the bespangled trainer with the long whip. But McGraw is a great baseball man. New York has spoiled him. Off the field he combines a geniality on one hand with a sneer for eevrything that does not pertain to his team. Stahl is a great baseball man, but he will never be spoiled. No one ever heard him say an unkind word of any man. Such are the two men. Win or lose this world series, which would you rather be?

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THIS is a funny sort of a world," said the Manicure Lady. "Today we are here and tomorrow we are in the Klondike, as one of them poets once said."

"What's the matter now?" asked the Head Barber.

"Oh, Wilfred got sore again the other night," replied the Manicure Lady. "He was saying something about writing a comic opera and father told him he ought to be able to write one, seeing what a joke he was himself. I don't think the old gent ought to sink the [illegible] into brother so hard. [illegible] a poet and I [illegible] a kind of a minor league [illegible] seeing that he can't [illegible] to [illegible] papers, but that [illegible] any reason why the old gent should [illegible] after him so hard. I think a son ought to be a true friend to his father, but when a father calls his son a joke and says that a man can't be a poet when he has a head shaped like a hubbard squash, I guess that the son has a right to object. How is a hubbard squash shaped, George?"

"All I remember is that it ain't round, but kind of big at one end and small at the other. I don't think it is right for your father to compare your brother's head to a [illegible] because from what poetry you have shown me of his I don't think his head is [illegible] anywhere.

"That's where you are wrong, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred's head is too big altogether. He has one of the biggest heads for a young man that was ever set on two shoulders. That's the real trouble with him, George. He thinks that when it comes to writing poetry he has Milton and Mister Dante looking like two deuces, and you know as well as I do, George, that ain't any way for a young man to think that never got no poems published except a few in a flour and feed trade paper."

"Well, what is all the matter about?" asked the Head Barber.

"Oh, nothing much. I was just talking [illegible] George, so that there would be something running through your empty head. The way I came to mention the thing at all was that Wilfred showed us a lyric that he thought was going to be the best lyric in the comic opera he is going to write. Listen to it:

"'The moon is shining on the lake
And you unto my heart I'd [illegible]
If you would swear by all the stars,
Including planets such as Mars,
That you would be my love, my queen,
You are the best I ever seen.'"

"I don't blame your father for bawling him out," said the Head Barber. "A kid that would write a thing like that and call it a lyric ought to be shot at sunrise."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

CULTIVATING HIS SENSE OF HUMOR

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THE manner in which he takes his women folks is the making or unmaking of a man.

If he frets over their inconsistencies, if he chafes under their exaggerations; if he mourns over their most elastic little moralities, he is a fool.

If he accepts them as a means of keeping young and green his sense of humor, he is a philosopher.

Lysander John Appleton is not always a philosopher. When his daughter, Daysey Mayme, was put on the program of the Women's Aviation Club and wrote a "very learned" (we quote the other women members) article on Audubon, as the "original bird man," her father's sense of humor was not even quickened.

He felt that he could endure no more. "I will go down to the station," he said, "and throw myself under a train." When he got to the station and had purchased a ticket for the purpose of passing through the gates and reaching the iron wheels, he found himself delayed by a long line of women ahead of him, and was forced to listen to their good-bys.

"I forgot to tell you," said one woman, screaming back to a big fat man, "that I left your medicine in the ice box."

"I will match the green if I can," was another woman's farewell message, "although I think mourning is so much [illegible] becoming to you."

A great, big athletic man was in line, and a frail, little woman was saying good-by to him.

"I don't like to have you go all alone," she sobbed; "you are so delicate and might get sick."

"Three eggs make it light enough," another woman was saying. "Now remember to write to me."

"Now promise me," said a very old lady to one two years her junior, "that you won't speak to any strange men on the train. Why, the things you read about that happen to women who speak to strange men on the train is something awful."

"I shall appear before the Legislature again," said a stern-looking woman, "and convince those weak, pin-headed, pusillanimous men up there that Woman, and Woman alone, is capable — —" A scream, and she dropped out of line. "Do you know," she said as she hurried back, "that I forgot to check my trunk?"

All around women were giving other women little pecks, called kisses, and breathing fond farewells, and turning away looking relieved.

Lysander John turned back. He had changed his mind. Instead of going to the iron wheels to meet death he would throw himself on the platform and laugh himself to death.

Swift & Company's sales of Fresh Beef in Boston for the week ending Saturday October 12th, averaged 11.87 cents per pound.

Charitably Disposed

"I [illegible]," began the beggar.

"Sorry, old man," said the brisk pedestrian, "but I have only one. However, if you'll pay the mortgage I'll give you that!"

Florence Moore Tells "How to Be Beautiful, Though Ugly"

Miss Florence Moore, of Montgomery and Moore, Stars of "Hanky Panky"

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

"GET right along out of here," said Miss Florence Moore, as she pushed her life and stage partner, Mr. Montgomery, out of the theatre.

"I am going to be interviewed on 'How to be beautiful, though ugly.'"

Miss Moore perched herself on a trunk as big as a touring car, and I sat before her to take account of stock, so to speak. She had had time to wash off her make-up, but I had not yet been able to realize just what kind of person was the girl who is called the funniest young woman on the stage.

You see it was like this: From an aisle seat in the theatre I had watched Miss Moore pick up Hanky Panky and walk off with it, in the slang of the stage, with a physical vitality which seemed extraordinary for a person of so slight a build. She acted her scenes with that whirlwind quality that takes your breath away, and she had been genuinely whimsical and irrepressibly funny.

Seldom Beautiful

In the first act, in a weird [illegible] costume, anyone else but Miss Moore would have been vulgar, but some indefinable quality keeps her from erring in this way and a preposterous sense of humor with a spontaneity which seems absolutely natural, wins the audience from the first.

Now funny women are very seldom beautiful; funny faces are not beautiful faces, though they may be lovable ones and are often fascinating ones. As I sat and watched and studied Miss Moore, I wondered how she had ever come to devote herself to being a comedienne. She has a very serious face, the eyes are extraordinarily earnest and penetrating, with something of the visionary look in them that belongs to the religious enthusiast. The mouth alone is humorous and very flexible. But she is pretty.

"Why didn't you go in for straight acting, where you could have been the beautiful lady of the piece?" I asked Miss Moore.

"Oh, there is a so much bigger field in this line of work, and it is so much more interesting. Besides, I think it's a fine thing to make people laugh if one can. Laughter is healthy, and there isn't half enough of it in the world. You must know my theories about remaining young, and oh, did you say beautiful? Thank you. I've never considered myself so, but all compliments are gratefully accepted. Well, I should advise women to cultivate a sense of humor and train their eyes on the sunny side of life.

"No matter how you feel about it, or what you really look like, the laughing, humorous face, even if it isn't strictly beautiful, is the face that people like to look at in preference to the sad-eyed, despairing beauty."

"But do you think a sense of humor can be cultivated?"

"Yes, I do, and I think is should be part of their education. If women would learn to look on the funny side of life, that side would grow, and they would see more and more funny and amusing things to interest them. Often when I go on the stage feeling 'down,' as one is apt to do, I see someone in the audience that strikes me as funny, and I begin to laugh and a whole lot is lifted from my shoulders.

"Nobody knows what I'm laughing at, and I suppose they think it's part of the show, but sometimes I catch sight of one of those [illegible] people who come to the theatre with the firm determination not to be amused and not to think any joke funny. They sit there with the expression that says, 'I dare you to make me laugh.' I always take the dare, and nothing gives me more joy that to bring a reluctant, shame-faced grin on such a face.

Why She Is Strong

"Where did you get all your strength from, Miss Moore? You certainly don't look robust, but you whirl around that stage and exude enough vitality to exhaust a giantess. I should think you'd be done up after each performance."

"Do you know I'm not in the least conscious of it until I come off and look over my gown, which is generally in shreds after the performance. This dress tells the story of how hard I work," and Miss Moore looked ruefully at her spangled frock and put her finger through numerous tears that bore witness to that evening's strenuous performance.

Though we were getting on nicely in a conversational way, I hadn't found out yet what was the secret power in this extraordinary young woman who can make a big audience laugh at her antics on the stage, and who is so earnest, so simple and unaffected, so anything but comic in private life.

She was still sitting on the touring trunk, brushing her long mane of hair which, unlike ordinary theatrical hair, grows on her own head and not on the dressing table.

"Miss Moore, do tell me how you do it. Your life is harder and more strenuous than that of the average woman in the audience. You have to be keyed up to a certain pitch every night to get your audience, and yet you don't look tired; in fact, you look younger off the stage than on it. Now confess, what do you do when you get to this theatre feeling that you haven't any vitality or any strength to work with, and yet knowing that you must play with all your mental vivacity?"

Miss Moore looked at me with those deep, penetrating eyes from which all mirth and roguishness were banished, and said: "I pray. I'm a Christian Scientist, and, often happens that when I get out before that big audience and feel my strength oozing from me, and my audience getting away, I just stand there and pray.

"I may be saying a joke with my lips, but right down in the bottom of my heart I'm praying for strength."

There was no need of questioning her any further, for despite the fact that she is known as the funniest woman on the stage, the secret of her power, which will be the secret of health and youth as long as she needs it, is a deep and spiritual one, which preachers and lecturers talk about, but which few can demonstrate as successfully as this comedienne.

Our Personal Taxes

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE girls to whom the words "Personal taxes" bring a vague memory of something that troubles Father several times a year, and to whom all tax questions seem mysterious problems beyond all understanding, have taxes of their own which they must pay.

Father loses his temper over the tax on mortgages, the tax on horses, bonds, automobile and furniture.

Daughter furrows her pretty brow and sheds a few tears, and scolds and pays taxes just as serious, and often more trying than those he pays.

For hers are the taxes she pays on friendship! There is nothing in his business life that is more fretting and more annoying than the little taxes she pays, though hers are not paid over a counter to a county official.

A friend borrows a book and returns it with the back half off. A friend makes an engagement and then presumes on the rights of friendship to break it on a moment's notice, and sometimes there is no notice at all.

A friend claims the right of criticism and exercises it beyond the bounds of criticism, the line between that gentle art of faultfinding and the more vulgar one of nagging being most delicately drawn.

A friend violates every law of confidence. A friend has been known countless times to come between a girl and the man she loves. A friend is at the same time the most worrying and the most comforting of all the companions life brings.

Must Pay Her Little Taxes

Father knows he must pay his taxes to keep his business credit good. Daughter must learn, if she has not already taken this painful lesson to heart, that she must pay all the little taxes on friendship with philosophic cheerfulness or be friendless.

It is better to lose an umbrella, to have one's most precious books returned looking as if spoiled children had played with them, and to spend hour after hour waiting for an appointment that has been disregarded than to go through life without friends.

There could be no fate that is worse. The friendless girl is hopeless. She is morbid. She is selfish. She is self-centred.

She misses all the little pin pricks of friendship, and she misses, also, its greater joys.

She misses the joy of self-sacrifice. She never learns the lesson every one should learn, and that is, self-effacement.

Every little tax she pays on friendship is good for her soul if she accept the lesson it brings in the payment.

If a friend is negligent in the little niceties and tries her almost beyond endurance, she profits by even such a friendship if, in paying her tax, she remembers the friend's many other good qualities.

The friend hurts her feelings. It is good for her to pay this tax on friendship, if, while remembering that the friend had no intention of hurting her, she must in future be less sensitive.

"The fault is half my own," is a good thing to say while paying a friendship tax. "I must not place umbrellas, books, ribbons, a few waiting hours, a few hasty words, above the value of human hearts. I need friends more than I need what I would save had I no friends and no tax on friendship to pay."

Not Always Easy to Pay

It isn't always easy to pay these little taxes smilingly, some of which are imposed so heedlessly and so unnecessarily, but paying them cheerfully makes the payment easier, and keeps the friend!

And by "friend" I mean one who likes you in spite of your faults. I do not mean the girl or boy you met yesterday, and with whom you made a compact two hours after meeting that you would be friends for life.

I mean those who have known you long enough to know your bad qualities as well as your good and who still like you.

No one is so wise that he can select his friends without an occasional heart-breaking mistake of judgment. Be just as wise as you can be in your selection. Then be a good friend yourself.

And one of the most important ingredients [illegible] of what constitutes a good friend [illegible] ability to pay every little tax on friendship cheerfully.

A Faithful Reflection

"I see the villain in your face," said the gruff lawyer who was trying to intimidate a witness.

"Very likely," was the calm reply; "the face of a bright person, like a mirror, is apt to cast personal reflections."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

An English clergyman turned to a Scotsman and asked him:

"What would you be were you not a Scot?"

The Scotsman said: "Why, an Englishman, of course."

Then the clergyman turned to the gentleman from Ireland and asked him:

"And what would you be were you not an Irishman?"

The man thought for a moment, and said:

"I'd be ashamed of meself."

HOW I KILLED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR.

Society Leader Tells How New Home Method Completely Destroyed Her Superfluous Hair, Never to Return

The Secret Free to All

There are probably few women afflicted with the odious disfigurement of superfluous hair on face, neck or arms, who have not wasted their money on one or many of the worthless concoctions advertised so widely, but which utterly fail in their purpose.

But at last a Scientist of recognized standing has come to their aid with a new scientific method, whereby all disfiguring hairy growths on face or neck can be forever banished from sight, as I happily found to be the case.

Although many things have failed in the past, I completely and forever destroyed my growth with a new method which was discovered by a former Professor of Chemistry at the famous College of Rugby, England, and who has been honored by the leading [illegible] ical and Pharmaceutical Societies of the world. I found this new method for destroying Superfluous Hair is not electricity, neither is it anything like the ordinary liquid, powder or paste depilatories hitherto used for temporary relief, and I found that though many things had failed and though heavy the growth, it may be relied upon to actually destroy hair, never to return.

If you are troubled with hair on the arms, so that you are unable to wear short sleeves with comfort, if you are afflicted with a growth of hair on the face or on the neck which interferes with your peace of mind and spoils your feminine appearance, you may have the full details for success, absolutely free, if you will send me your name and address, stating whether Mrs. or Miss, and a two-cent stamp for return, addressed to Mrs. Kathryn Jenkins, Flat 110 J. K., Duckworth Apartments, Scranton, Pa.

Cooper's New Discovery Drives Away Your Stomach Pains

Many people nowadays are apt to use drugs for quick relief every time they have an ache or a pain. This is only temporary treatment and is bad for the system generally. If persisted in it will lead to scores of complaints and even serious illness that might have been avoided. Take the common complaint of constipation—every one knows, or should know, that every dose of a cathartic gives relief only for the time being and in reality it aggravates the trouble. If you take cathartics continually you are liable to have chronic constipation. It is the same way with stomach trouble, headaches, dizziness or liver and kidney disorders. If you have gas on the stomach or pains after eating and take a pepsin tablet, bicarbonate of soda, charcoal, or what not, you are only getting temporary relief. The same thing applies in curing a headache with headache powders. As a matter of fact you are in a worse condition as soon as the acute part of the attack is over.

Cooper's New Discovery

banishes constipation because it is mildly laxative and removes the cause—stomach trouble. It stops pains in the stomach and gas belching because it drives away the catarrhal inflammation which is causing the trouble. It stops headaches, dizziness, improves digestion and makes away with kidney and liver trouble because it puts the body in a healthy condition and there is no longer any cause for disease.

The Thrilling Love Story of a Poor Young Man Who Got Rich and a Counterfeiter Who Reformed

STEVE PLEADS WITH THE MAGNATE

Scene from Act 1, Where Steve Baird (William Courtenay) Entertains Morgan (Scott Cooper) and Pleads with Him to Extend His $20,000 Note on the Mine

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

NEW YEAR'S EVE finds Stephen Baird, a young mine-owner, "broke." He determines not to go to a party given by his roommate, Sam Welch, although Grace Tyler, Baird's sweetheart, is to be there. Sam is waiting for the guests to arrive, and Sumer Holbrook is announced. Holbrook says he had bought some of the stock in the "Skyrocket" mine owned by Baird, and is afraid it is worthless. Holbrook leaves and Sam wishes him a "Happy New Year."

Now Go On With the Story

Now playing at Maxine Elliott's Theatre, N. Y. City, and the New Theatre, London.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

PART I.—(Continued)

"SAME to you!" And Holbrook hastened out. A moment later the doorbell rang again and a gay company swept over Neil and stormed into the big reception room with shouts and laughter. They shook hands with Welch and slapped him on the back. The men shouted and the women squeaked and bubbled, and it was two or three minutes before any one could make himself heard. The party was led by Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, the latter a matronly lady with a forbidding aspect, now somewhat relaxed like the thawed surface of a frozen pond on an April day. Mr. Tyler was plainly, for all his business success, merely Mrs. Tyler's husband. Their daughters, Grace and Ida, Miss Margaret Elliott, Sidney Rosenthal and William Stewart, were the young people. The immediate demand of all was for "Steve."

"Where is he?" they chorused.

"Sh-h!" begged Welch.

"Well?" demanded Mrs. Tyler in a voice that made Sam start.

"He had an important business engagement," lied Sam, with the ease and fluency born of long practice. There was a general, disappointed "Oh!" Mrs. Tyler refused to make it unanimous.

"Very strange!" she said, her lips pursing together. "However, bearing in mind the fact that he has not transacted any business the entire year, this is his last opportunity."

Sam desperately pulled out his watch. "I don't want to hurry you," he said, while the others blessed him, "but it is nearly 11:30!" There was a general rush to take off wraps.

At this moment Steve was standing on a street corner about a half-mile away. He took out his watch, but did not look at the hands. He gazed long at the face of the girl and he was thinking that on January 2 he had to meet a note for $20,000 or lose his mine. He gazed at the girl's face and his other hand fumbled the quarter. They were his only assets.

"It's heavy odds," he said, grimly, to himself. "But, by the Lord Harry, I've got to find a way!"

About Steve.

IN spite of Sam Welch's earnest extempore effort to save the day and Steve Baird, he could not quite turn Mrs. Tyler from the trail. When he announced that it was nearly 11:30 the others hastened out to take off their wraps, but Mrs. Tyler refused to budge. Mr. Tyler remained because Mrs. Tyler did not dismiss him. Grace remained because she wanted to fight for her sweetheart if necessary. Sam remained because he didn't dare try to get away.

"We must hurry mother—father!" exclaimed the girl with the unnecessary bustle of one trying to give the impression of feverish haste.

"Yes, dear," agreed Mr. Tyler, eagerly making for the door. He made it a rule always to agree with his women folks and also, like Eugene Field's old Dutch clock, "he always dreaded a family row." He could sense the gathering storm.

"Wait! Grace!" said Mrs. Tyler in two entirely different tones, the one silencing her daughter and the other bringing her husband to a halt as if with a tether rope. "Sam," she went on, sternly, addressing herself to the young host, who squirmed under her eye, "have you seen Mr. Stephen Baird tonight?"

"No, Mrs. Tyler," replied Sam, gloomily. "It's disgraceful!" Mrs. Tyler declared with a snap of her ample jaw. "Do you suppose"—she glowered at her daughter—"that I would have married your father if he had neglected me in this way?"

"Mother, please!" implored the girl, with a shamed glance at Welch.

"I want Mr. Welch to hear—he understands!" proclaimed her mother. Sam did understand. He said all sorts of disgraceful things about Mrs. Tyler under his breath. "Where is your pride?" demanded the duenna. "Do you suppose your little sister would allow Mr. Stewart to desert her on New Year's Eve? She has some spirit! What do you think people will say?"

The Girl's Retort

There was a fair measure of her mother in Grace. Her eyes flashed and there was a spot of color in each cheek.

"Those who have good taste will say nothing!" she retorted instantly. The aim was perfect, Mrs. Tyler gasped.

"Grace!"

"Grace, you must not say sharp things," admonished her father. "It is a fault I have to correct in your mother."

Mrs. Tyler welcomed this imprudent remark. She turned her wrath on her husband with a feeling of security.

"You go and find the young men and ask them where you are to put your hat and coat," she commanded, grimly.

"Yes, my dear," said Mr. Tyler, vanishing as he spoke. Mrs. Tyler turned once more to Welch. "Did you say that Mr. Baird had a business engagement?"

"Yes, you said that; didn't you, Sam?" interposed Grace quickly. Her mother glared.

"One moment, please!" (To Sam)—"Where?"

"I don't know," confessed Sam, feeling like an untruthful witness in the hands of a shrewd cross-examiner.

"Um!" remarked Mrs. Tyler. "Grace, unless Mr. Baird is at the table tonight I forbid any further friendship between you!" The girl stood, motionless and silent. Sam coughed. "Have you a cold?" inquired Mrs. Tyler, icily.

"Oh, no," replied Sam, wildly. "I've been coughing like that all evening."

"Oh, you have?" said Mrs. Tyler. She might as well have said, "Oh, you liar!"

Unable to control herself longer, Grace turned away and gazed out into the brightly lighted street. It was all a silver dinness to her.

"There!" exclaimed Mrs. Tyler, despairingly. "Now you are going to spoil my entire evening by crying—a cheerful attitude to assume on New Year's Eve! Do we wear our wraps at the table?" she inquired of the host, apparently considering the incident closed.

"The ladies are in the corner room," replied the host, absently. He felt as distinctly uncomfortable as ever before in his life, and before their trains had disappeared around the door frame he had poured out a large drink and emptied it into himself.

More Inquiries

Rosenthal and Stewart had evidently been waiting for the ladies to leave, for they had hardly gone before they were joining their host in a New Year's drink. Rosenthal was possessed of a round, frank countenance, snapping black eyes and wavy hair to match, and carried with him an air of breezy and boundless energy and good nature. He was engaged to Miss Elliott. Stewart was the somewhat colorless but adequate-looking type of well-bred young New Yorker. After the drinks had been disposed of, Rosenthal turned to Sam with the natural query:

"Where's Steve?"

"I don't know," snapped Sam.

"Isn't he coming?" asked Stewart, really surprised.

"How do you suppose I know?" demanded Sam, angrily. "I'm not his keeper!" He felt just then that he never wanted to hear of Steve again.

"What will Grace think?" murmured Stewart with a low whistle. "I thought you'd have Steve here."

"Well, I invited him, didn't I? He promised he'd be here—if he wants to break his word that lets me out! I'm not expected to look all over town for him! This is the last party I'll ever try to give —I'm cured! I don't care whether he comes or not!"

Stewart glanced at his watch. "He's got fifteen minutes yet," he said soothingly.

STATE STREET, Oct. 15.—We said yesterday that we wouldn't get scared very long, no matter what those fellows over in the Sultan's bailiwick did with their firearms, and today we showed 'em that we could "come back."

Why, even Canadian Pacific went up in a balloon in London, and New York and Boston saw the very nicest kind of markets right from the start.

Just as Canadian Pacific has recently led the downward movement of the stock market, so did it lead the upward range of prices at the opening. It opened at 266, or 2⅝ over last night's closing in Wall street. Firmness marked the list and general gains were made throughout. Among the advances were United States Steel common ¼, Amalgamated Copper ⅜, American Smelting ⅞, Erie common ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio ⅜, Atchison ¼, Reading 1, Lehigh Valley ¾, Union Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅝, Southern Railway ⅜.

Cables reported real strength in the foreign markets.

The attempted assassination of Colonel Roosevelt had absolutely no effect on the market.

The New York Curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific there was bought vigorously.

The treasurer of Medford will receive bids until 9 a. m. October 22 for a temporary loan of $25,000 in anticipation of taxes maturing May 5, 1913.

J. Thomas Reinhardt's creditors have elected W. D. B. Brown, receiver, as trustee in bankruptcy.

"I look for big earnings from Chesapeake & Ohio during the balance of the present fiscal year. In the first place, the outlook for business could hardly be improved upon, the property is now in excellent physical condition and net returns will undoubtedly score big gains.

The London Market Finally Rallies and Paris Is Feeling More Confident—Can. Pac. Is Up.

SHOWS THAT REMAIN HERE

Shows That Remain.

"Robin Hood" continues at the Boston Theatre, where its tuneful qualities are attracting favorable attention.

Rose Stahl and "Maggie Pepper" began a new week at the Park Theatre last evening.

"Broadway to Paris," with Gertrude Hoffmann and many girls, began its first full week at the Shubert last evening.

"Little Boy Blue" is enjoying prosperity at the Majestic Theatre.

"A Polish Wedding" is now on its final week at the Tremont Theatre.

"The Quaker Girl" holds its popularity at the Colonial Theatre.

The Durbar in Kinemacolor will continue through the present week at Tremont Temple.

Violet Mascotte's "Review Girls" began another merry week at the Bowdoin yesterday.

The Alaska-Siberian motion pictures continue at Jordan Hall.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Darlings of Paris" attracted a big crowd to the Old Howard yesterday. Besides the burlesque there were a number of vaudeville features.

Grand Opera House.

"The Lady Buccaneers" contributed a lively entertainment at the Grand Opera House yesterday. The show will remain the entire week.

Casino Theatre.

Billy Arlington and "The Golden Crook" burlesquers began a week's stay at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. It was lively burlesque.

National Theatre.

Ma-Belle, a sensational as well as artistic dancer, who created a sensation at B. F. Keith's Theatre last week, headed the new bill at the National Theatre yesterday. Ma-Belle, who is assisted by eight dancing girls, gives what is called a Sylvian ballet, and those who have seen the number agree that it is one of the most beautifully staged dancing specialties in vaudeville. Besides Ma-Belle the National program contained a dozen other attractive features.

Globe Theatre.

Old friends were discovered in the new program at the Globe Theatre yesterday. The Brothers Bryne, for instance, headed the bill with a condensed and vaudeville version of their famous "Eight Bells," one of the most astonishing and bewildering trick comedies ever produced. Other spirited vaudeville acts were the Three Musketeers, a singing organization that specialized in comedy; Moran and Moran, who gave a humorous playlet called "On a Side Street"; Hardara, a comedy juggler; Marcus and Gartelia, sensational skaters, and Cole and Coleman, musical artists. There were new motion pictures and complete changes in the other regular Globe features.

Scenic Temple.

New vaudeville and motion pictures, as well as a concert program, made up the new bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday.

Hub Theatre.

A complete change of vaudeville and motion pictures was made at the Hub Theatre yesterday. The new bill proved attractive to the day's patrons.

Gaiety Theatre.

The coming of Jack Singer's "Behman" show is always an irresistible invitation to burlesque patrons to join in the merriment. It was so at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, when the Watson Sisters, Lew Kelly, Fred Wyckoff and the rest of the lively people who contribute to the joys of "A Mix-up at Newport" faced the big audiences. The real strength of this show was found in the entertaining qualities of the players in the company. Lew Kelly, whose dope fiend is perhaps the most artistic specialty in burlesque, found himself among friends, a fact that repeated itself in the case of Kitty and Fanny Watson, who had no trouble in capturing and holding their audience. Good looking girls made an attractive border to the entertainment.

Huntington Avenue Theatre.

New pictures and vaudeville made up the program at the Huntington Avenue Theatre yesterday.

Orpheum Theatre.

There is always more than ordinary interest in the so-called handcuff kings of vaudeville. Hardeen, one of these unique entertainers, topped the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday, and astonished everybody with his weird tricks. There were a half dozen other features on the program, including new motion pictures.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"Coming Home to Roost," a new play by Edgar Selwyn, was presented at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening. It will be reviewed in Wednesday's AMERICAN.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEN OPEN CONVENTION

The New England section of the National Electric Light Association opened a three days' convention at Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics building, today. Tomorrow evening there will be a dance for the delegates and ladies, and Thursday evening President Taft will speak at a banquet.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The death of David Bruce-Brown on the course at Milwaukee will not be without effect in governing future road races. The racing drivers have decided to request the American Automobile Association to make stringent rules for the construction of the roads in road races, prescribing the minimum width, maximum height of crown and the ditching. The Milwaukee road was resurfaced without the removal of the old surface, which resulted in a high crown and an uneven traction when a car was passing another, and also caused the edges of the road to be soft. The verdict of the coroner's jury which investigated the death of Bruce-Brown bears out the drivers.

P. E. Hawley, general New England manager of the Studebaker Corporation, has just returned from the factory in Detroit. He spent all last week watching the various departments and making arrangements for the early delivery of the 1913 cars. Mr. Hawley reports that the demand for the Studebaker delivery cars has been exceptionally heavy, so much so that he has been forced to increase his allotment from the factory.

"The Studebaker Company," says he, "is working double time in every department."

KAISER HITS AT STANDARD OIL

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The Kaiser has taken a hand in the trust question as it applies to Germany. A government bill is soon to be introduced, it is learned, aimed at Standard Oil, which is trying to oust retailers. The bill is intended to bar that company from "the wholesale business in illuminating oils in Germany which is to be entrusted to a national stock company operating under government supervision. This form has been chosen by the government as being superior to that of a state monopoly."

The new company is to be empowered to acquire the existing wholesale oil plants and stocks by expropriation if necessary.

The capital of the new company is to be furnished partly by the big German banks and partly by open subscription. The life of the corporation is fixed at thirty years.

The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says the Standard Oil Company has already obtained control of wholesale trade in illuminants in Germany and is attempting to eliminate retailers.

$50,000 Wardrobe of Valeska Suratt is Attached by Doctor

Boston theatregoers were interested today in a report that the famous "$50,000 wardrobe" of Valeska Suratt, the brilliant young star in "The Kiss Waltz," which was in Boston recently, has been attached by an osteopath.

The attachment is made by Dr. H. Conner, who asserts that last February he treated the actress for pains in her legs, from dancing. He says his bill of $250 has been repeatedly ignored, and he filed the attachment after finding that Miss Suratt paid no attention to his demands.

Clearance Sale of Pianos
That Have Been Rented For the Summer Months

While we have always made a specialty of renting pianos for the summer season, our rental business this year was nearly double that of any previous year.
With these pianos returning from the various summer homes, we find our warerooms cramped for space. We therefore offer which include nearly all the well-known makes at prices that cannot fail to interest the careful buyer.

NEARLY 50 PIANOS,
These pianos have been used from three to six months, and while they cannot be sold for new, their value as far as actual quality of tone, beauty of design and finish are concerned is practically 100 cents on the dollar.
We mention but a few of these wonderful values, which mean a GREAT SAVING TO YOU if you are contemplating the purchase of a piano.

Proposals.

FINAL DISPOSITION OF GARBAGE.
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.
CHICAGO, October 7, 1912.

Sealed proposals will be received by the City of Chicago until 11 a. m. Tuesday, October 22, 1912, at room 406 City Hall, for the construction of a garbage reduction plant and the final disposition of garbage for a period of five years, as delivered by the City of Chicago, beginning September 1, 1913, and ending August 31, 1918.

The contract will be awarded by the City Council to the responsible bidder whose bid is the best and most advantageous to the city for the final disposition of garbage for the full period of five (5) years, as mentioned above.

Proposals for bids shall provide for: First, bids on the basis of using a site provided by the city, which site shall be located either outside of the city limits, or within the city limits; if within the city limits, said site to be located along the drainage canal, at a point near the bridge of the Belt Railroad at South 46th avenue, to be selected by the City Comptroller and the Commissioner of Public Works; and which site shall be prepared by the necessary grading, the construction of necessary dock facilities and the erection of suitable buildings thereon. Second, bids on the basis of the bidder supplying a site of his own, located outside of the city limits, on which he shall make all improvements at his own expense. Bids will be received on either basis or on both, and on each and all of the following alternative propositions:

1. A proposition which leaves it optional with the city to purchase the plant at the expiration of the period contracted for at a price to be determined by arbitration, as provided for by the specifications.

2. A proposition under which the price of the plant is fixed by the bidder, such plant to become the property of the city at the end of the period contracted for, payment for the same to be made in five equal instalments, payable in one, two, three, four and five years, respectively, from the beginning of the said period. The bid for the plant shall be distinct from the bid for the work of garbage disposal.

3. A proposition under which the plant shall become the property of the city at the end of the period contracted for at a price to be determined by arbitration, as provided for by the specifications, payment for such plant to be made at the end of said period.

Proposals must be made out upon blanks furnished at the office of the Commissioner of Public Works, room No. 406 City Hall, Chicago, and be addressed to said Commissioner, indorsed, "Proposals for Final Disposition of Garbage," and must be accompanied with twenty thousand ($20,000) dollars in money, or a certified check for the same amount on some responsible bank located and doing business in the City of Chicago, and made payable to the order of the Commissioner of Public Works, which sum shall be subject to forfeiture in case of failure to enter into the contract if awarded to such bidder. The bidder may bid on any or all of the propositions set forth in the proposal.

Each proposal must be accompanied by the affidavit of the bidder or his or its duly authorized agents, showing that no person, firm or corporation, other than such bidder, has any interest whatever in such proposal or the proposed contract, and that such proposal is made without connection, connivance or collusion with any other firm, person or corporation. Where such affidavit is purported to be made by a duly authorized agent, the same must be accompanied by satisfactory evidence of such agency. Proposals not so accompanied will be rejected as informal.

No proposal will be considered unless the party offering it shall furnish evidence to the Commissioner of Public Works that he has the necessary facilities, together with sufficient pecuniary resources, to fulfil the conditions of the contract and specifications, provided such contract should be awarded to him.

Unless all bids are rejected, the contract will be awarded within sixty (60) days from the date of opening of the bids, and all deposits of money or checks accompanying same made in good faith if not forfeited under the terms of the advertisement and specifications, shall be returned to the owners within sixty (60) days.

The City Council of the City of Chicago reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Copies of the specifications can be obtained at room 406 City Hall, Chicago.

Companies or firms bidding will give the individual names and addresses of the officers of such companies, or members of such firms, as well as the names and addresses of the companies or firms.

L. E. McGANN,
Commissioner of Public Works.

A Crime Against Democracy and the Republic

Every American will rejoice from the bottom of his heart if the weirdly wicked attempt on the life of Theodore Roosevelt, at Milwaukee, last night, does no serious permanent harm to him.

Deep moral harm, alas! was done when the demented fiend fired the shot. The harm was not alone to the illustrious man, of whose career this and future generations of Americans will be proud. The crime was against the Republic, against all democracy.

By the new law passed after the assassination of Mr. McKinley, a mere attempt on the life of a President, however impotent or harmless, is punishable by death. If Colonel Roosevelt were President, therefore, instead of ex-President, the insane criminal who shot with intent to kill him, would expiate the crime by death. As Colonel Roosevelt is now a plain citizen his would-be assassin will undoubtedly end his days in an asylum for the criminal insane. If we know Colonel Roosevelt he will not even prosecute his assailant. Fortunately, his testimony will not be necessary.

How appalling it is that in this freest of all countries, where the wildest of free speech is not only permitted by law, but tolerated—where the selection of our rulers is made by public opinion, and where even our fundamental laws are changed in obedience to the wishes of the majority, that the hideous crime of assassination should ever exist in even the weakest brain or the blackest heart.

Every American citizen may devoutly thank God that ex-President Roosevelt escaped an untimely death, and, praying for his speedy recovery, will fervently hope that the foul and infamous crime of political assassination may be blotted from the fevered brains of frenzied partisans, and from the annals of this great Republic.

The Boston & Albany Railroad Remembers Its First Name

This Announcement, Together With the Likelihood That Mr. Stahl and His Boys Are About to Return to the Family Domicile With the Bacon, Is Likely to Prove a Shock to People in Ottuma, Iowa, Who Think Boston Went Down at About the Time of the Tea Party. The Boston & Albany Railroad Is to Be Commended, and We Hurry With Our Compliments

Wherever you may go, the wide world over, everybody knows the Boston of HISTORY and LETTERS and INVENTION.

The Boston of COMMERCE is not so well known.

Many things have conspired to keep MODERN Boston, COMMERCIAL and INDUSTRIAL BOSTON, in comparative obscurity.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce—the new, larger Chamber, of the past few years—has done a lot to set the commercial world right about OUR Boston, the Boston of TODAY.

At present, the Boston Baseball Club of the American League is in a fair way to further demonstrate that the Boston of today is WITHOUT A PEER IN THE WORLD.

And now comes Mr. James H. Huestis, the New York Central vice-president, in charge of the Boston & Albany Railroad, with the announcement that the NAME of Boston is going back upon the rolling stock of the Boston & Albany in letters that will be read, as the rolling stock travels, from one end of the country to the other.

In July of last year the Boston & Albany became a "separate property," under a ten-year agreement with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company.

The hope was entertained at that time—we don't know WHY it was entertained, but it WAS entertained—that the name of Boston might be restored to its old-time prominence in connection with the Boston & Albany.

Now comes VISIBLE PROOF, in the new lettering of the locomotives and the cars of the Boston & Albany, that the management has seen the reasonableness of the contention of Boston business men. TODAY we are advised that the Boston & Albany has placed an order for 4,000 new freight cars. These cars are to be delivered between now and January. Every one of them will proclaim, all over the country, from Maine to California and from the Gulf to Canada, that the BOSTON OF COMMERCE is as real and as important in its way as the Boston of history and letters and invention.

And so today the AMERICAN will say ABSOLUTELY NOTHING about steel passenger cars. We MENTIONED steel passenger cars some time ago, and, besides, steel cars are BOUND TO COME.

WHEN THE BIG RAILROAD MEN DISPLAY A WILLINGNESS TO PLEASE BOSTON, LET BOSTON SHOW GENEROUS APPRECIATION OF THEIR FRIENDLY WILLINGNESS.

The decision of the present Boston & Albany management to put Boston back upon the RAILROAD MAP is a decision that ought to be highly pleasing to every resident of this great and growing capital of New England.

A Little Lie Is a Dangerous Thing

The Book Agents Deserve Sympathy—Theirs Is an Ungrateful Business

They Are as a Rule More Honest Than Their Employers—They Should Find Other and Better Occupations

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

Do not buy books of book agents.

Buy books for what they are worth, not with the salary of a book agent added.

When a man tells you that a special edition is sold for $19 because a page was accidentally printed upside down, HE IS FOLLOWING HIS EMPLOYER'S INSTRUCTIONS TO CHEAT THE PUBLIC.

The book supposed to be cheap at $19 did not cost $3 to make. You pay $19 or more for what you might buy for $3 or $4 or $5—because you are paying for the TIME of the book agent who thinks he makes you want the book, and you are paying for the EXPENSIVE INSTALMENT plan system of book buying.

There was a time when the people were more ignorant than they are now, when many could hardly read, when big, fat books with fancy covers were bought "to look respectable on the table." In those days the book agent used to point out the pictures, tell preposterous yarns about the value of the books, and by misrepresenting the cost of the books, and urging the easy payment system, books were sold at a tremendous profit—often books of inferior kinds, and the buying of good books was discouraged.

The book agents, as a class—men and women—are worthy of sympathy, hard working and honest. Unfortunately, they are employed and sent out too often by dishonest concerns, that send them detailed instructions as to swindling and deceiving the public. They are compelled by the nature of their business to annoy the public.

They are bound to make the book pay for its cost, for the publisher's profit, for the loss when the instalments are not paid by the others, and also for their own time.

If you buy a book in a book store, you get what you want at a fair price.

When you buy a book of a book agent, you pay for his time—which does you no good—you pay for the bad debts of others that do not meet their instalments.

When you want to buy books, make up your mind WHAT you want, write or go to a first-class store, and get the goods at a fair price.

The day of the book agent has gone by.

And that particular nuisance and interference with the rights of citizens should be suppressed.

"We Are All Needed in This World"

Special Announcement to Women Who Earn Money at Home

One Dollar will be paid for every letter contributed by Boston AMERICAN readers, and used in the AMERICAN, containing ideas helpful to those WOMEN WHO WISH TO EARN MONEY AT HOME. This department is organized to help women help themselves. It will suggest opportunities for money-making and will help those who wish to develop the ideas they are now using in their homes for increasing their incomes. Won't you please tell me what you are doing and why you are doing it, so that we may be of service to some woman who is struggling in the dark and who needs our help? This Department Will Appear in the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN

By MABEL BARCLAY URY

"We are all needed in this world—practically every one of us, and not even God Himself can take our place," said Dr. Thomas C. Hall to the great audience that packed Ford Hall Sunday evening. And the crowd cheered and filled the place with applause.

This, mind you, is the tribute paid by a thinking, working, keenly alert audience—people to whom nothing is sacred that does not serve humanity. I'll confess that the reception given that statement surprised me. I did not know that such a thought was so firmly lodged in the minds of the workers of the world.

"You should please you," whispered my friend, "for that is the message you have been giving the readers of the AMERICAN for weeks."

And that is the truth. The AMERICAN has tried to tell you day after day that you are needed in the world—that no one can take your place. You are unique. You are individual.

You have been created for a purpose. You are here to serve in the working out of some cosmic scheme too great for men to understand. You've got to believe in the Great Executive. You've got to have faith. You've got to trust.

But most of all you've got to serve others. To help others grow, to fill the needs of your neighbors, to make your neighborhood a pleasanter place for your presence in it—that is your job.

I am not forgetting that it is money you want. But I know that comes to those who fill the needs of others. The greater the need you fill the greater will be your reward in fame and money. But no matter what your position, there is a money-earning chance for you right where you are.

You are needed. No one, as the Ford Hall speaker said, can fill your place. This faith in self is the first essential in business success. Unless you believe in yourself, in your ability to serve others, in the value of the service you offer, no power in heaven or on earth can make you a success.

Have faith and money and all other desirable things will be added unto you. Believe in yourself and use your physical and mental power to help others. You will succeed.

An Order Food Sale.

It began with a church food sale at my home and the telephone orders for food kept coming in all day until practically everything was sold out in advance.

After this I would often have a telephone call when some friend would say: "When are you going to have another food sale?"

"I think I will have one of my own," I would answer. "What do you want?" When my friends found that I was in earnest they began to send in their orders.

Friday and Saturday I baked, and Saturday afternoon I secured two trusty boys and sent them out to deliver the food and bring me back the money for it.

My first order food sale, which was the forerunner of weekly sales during the Fall and Winter, was as follows: Twelve dozen doughnuts at 15 cents a dozen, eight loaves of white bread at 12 cents a loaf, fifteen quarts of baked beans at 15 cents a quart, ten loaves of steamed brown bread at 10 cents a loaf, six mince pies at 25 cents each, two large loaves of orange sponge cake at 50 cents a loaf, two loaves of nut meat cake at 50 cents a loaf, two apple jelly layer cakes at 35 cents apiece.

My profit on this first sale was about $3, and I found that at the prices I have quoted 50 cents of every dollar I received for food was clear profit.

Children's Scrap Books.

The making of children's scrap books occupies all my spare time at home.

Advertisements, old magazines and the AMERICAN funny sheet supply me with pictures.

These are pasted on paper cambric. Because of their durability and attractiveness, these books sell very quickly.

Sells Post Cards.

With ten in my family and only one working, I often wished I could do something to help. One day, looking over some advertisements, I saw post-cards advertised from $2.50 a thousand up. I sent for some and sold them at 1 cent apiece, which made quite a profit.
